103 in House Sign Plea To Release Hatch Bill

Petition Sets Record For Speed; Rules Or Judiciary Group May Free Measure

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Smoke-out of the Hatch "clean politics" bill from a House Judiciary Committee pigeon-hole appeared likely last night as 103 House members signed a discharge petition and two other routes opened to action.

A record first-day line-up of members to sign the discharge petition introduced by Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, brought in a few hours nearly half the 218 signatures required.

Prospects of Judiciary Committee reconsideration of its 14 to 10 secret ballot tabling the measure brightened as the number reported claiming to have voted against the motion mounted to 16.

Rule to Be Considered

A third possible lever for forcing action may be brought into play Wednesday, when a "green light" rule will be considered by the House Rules Committee. Chairman Sabbath, of the Rules Committee, who opposed the original Hatch Act, said "We might give Mr. Dempsey a rule—I will have to study the bill further."

The pending measure, approved by the Senate, supplements the Hatch Act passed last session which prohibited political activities by all but top flight Government employes. The pending bill applies the same rule to State employes paid wholly or in part from Federal funds.

Two members of the Judiciary Committee, Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, and Representative Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, meanwhile predicted the Judiciary group at its Tuesday meeting will reconsider the tabling motion.

"Had Fill of Secrecy"

"The committee has had its fill of secrecy," said Guyer, who is ranking minority member of the group. "I don't believe one single member will vote against reconsideration. And this time I think the vote will be on the record."

Guyer denied having told anyone he voted for the tabling motion, and said he favored "untabling" the bill and considering changes in committee. He offered to make the reconsideration motion.

Murdock, who vainly fought the secrecy procedure in committee and failed Wednesday in an effort at reconsideration, said he would make the move again Tuesday, and he thought with better results.

Technically, it was said by a committee parliamentarian, this second motion to reconsider would be "out of order" but the committee does not always follow a rigid interpretation of rules.

Republicans and Democrats were nearly equally divided in first-day signers, with the former leading.

Geographical division played no greater part than did party designation.

Representative Dempsey, who launched the three-way fight to force House action on the bill immediately after the committee's pigeon-holing maneuver, yesterday said he was "confident now that we will get action."

Bimelech Still Favorite

Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech last night remained a heavy favorite to capture the largest share of the record $75,000 added money in today's sixty-fifth annual Kentucky Derby as indications pointed to a small field of not more than six or seven starters.

HAIGHT

Latest odds established Bimelech as a 2-5 favorite with Dit and Pictor co-favored second choices at 8-1. Longest shot of the field is True Star, quoted at 100-1.

In his final tuneup yesterday Bimelech scampered a half-mile in 0:49 3-5 under the watchful eye of Trainer Bill Hurley.

Mexico Settles Oil Dispute With Sinclair

Action Indicates Break in United Front of U. S. Firms

By the Associated Press

A partial settlement of the long and bitter dispute over Mexico's seizure of American oil lands was reported last night from Mexico City and the report seemed to be confirmed by developments here.

Dispatches from Mexico City said that the Consolidated Oil Co. (Sinclair) had reached a settlement with the Mexican government.

The Sinclair properties were among the American lands expropriated on March 18, 1938. In the long dispute that followed, the American companies sought return of the oil fields or prompt compensation. They attempted to form a united front and sought a settlement covering all the oil lands.

Break in United Front

The Mexican government, on the other hand, held that settlements could be reached with the companies individually and was against making the controversy an international diplomatic incident. Last night's developments appeared to indicate a break in the united front.

It was understood the agreement with Consolidated involved the delivery of Mexican oil to that company.

In Washington, Jesus Silva Herzog, general manager of the Mexican Petroleum Distribution Agency, announced he had concluded contracts with three United States companies for sale of Mexican petroleum products. The contracts would amount, he said, to an aggregate of $54,000,000 spread over 4 or 5 years.

Silva Herzog named the First National Oil Corporation, of New York City, as one of the companies now willing to buy Mexican oil. He declined to name the other two.

Reply to Hull Received

Some time ago Secretary of State Hull urged Mexico to arbitrate the whole oil expropriation issue. The Mexican reply has been delivered in Washington and is being decoded and translated for publication tomorrow morning. It is understood that Mexico has rejected the idea of arbitration, flatly.

In State Department circles it was said that regardless of the reported settlement with Sinclair, the diplomatic controversy with Mexico would be continued.

The belief was expressed here that the department would continue to demand prompt indemnification for others involved or submission of their problems to arbitration.

House Kills Wage-Hour Amendments

Sends Both 'Mild' And 'Drastic' Bills Back to Committee; Party Lines Ignored

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

After seven days of fruitless debate, the House yesterday threw up its hands on proposed amendments to the wage-hour act and effectively killed any alteration in the law in the present session.

Completely ignoring party lines, the House first defeated, 211 to 171, a bill embodying alterations to the law so drastic that it was estimated a total of 3,000,000 workers would be withdrawn from protection of the wages or hours provisions.

Then, by a vote of 205 to 170, the original mild amendments introduced 14 months ago to alleviate "hardship cases" were sent back to the Labor Committee, where they are assured of peaceful death.

The double-barreled action of the House was widely regarded as a major victory for the Roosevelt Administration, especially in view of the fact that the President has indicated that he favors no changes in the law at the present time.

Strange Coalition

However, the majority that succeeded by a 35-vote margin in recommitting the entire wage-hour question to the Labor Committee was composed of a strange coalition of New Dealers opposed to any change in the law and conservatives who thought the pending bill—which was written last year with Administration approval—did not go far enough.

In fact, it was Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, who offered the recommittal motion at the very moment that Representative Marcantonio, of New York, ultra-New Dealer, was shouting for recognition for the same purpose.

Linked in Parity

And defeat a few minutes earlier of the so-called Norton bill—which Mrs. Norton, chairman of the Labor Committee, had disowned because it contained such sweeping exemptions to the wage-hour law—was helped along by the fact that the vote on an unbudgeted $212,000,000 for farm parity payments is coming up next week. Members of the urban bloc had warned the farm group that passage of drastic wage-hour exemptions would mean disaster for parity.

The lengthy struggle, which kept the chamber in a week-long state

Withdrawal Rocks British Cabinet; Greece Fears War as Fleets Mass

Italy Adds To Dodecanese Garrison; Allied Ships Off Egypt

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Athens, May 3.—Arrival of a British-French battle fleet in Alexandria and reports of a large-scale Italian naval, air and army concentrations in the Dodecanese Islands switched southeastern Europe's anxiety over possible spread of the war sharply to Greece today. Athens was calm but alert.

In Turkey, the Allied fleet's arrival at its Egyptian base was greeted as new evidence that Britain and France are determined to fulfill their obligations in the Near East, which include a mutual assistance treaty with Turkey and guarantees of the independence of Greece and Rumania.

There was no outward show of belief either in Greece or Turkey that war is imminent, but both countries pursued their defense preparations.

Italian Reports Unconfirmed

Reports received in diplomatic quarters of Italian reinforcements in the Dodecanese remained without official confirmation but generally were given credence.

Opinions varied as to whether the Italian move had been taken to counter the Allied naval operations and the emergency measures put into effect in Egypt yesterday, or whether it was planned first and precipitated the British-French action.

[The Associated Press reported from Ankara, Turkey, that Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, was authoritatively reported today to have been called urgently to Berlin for a conference with Hitler and to be leaving tonight by train.]

Tension in Yugoslavia, which had diminished a little with Italian diplomatic assurances of the past few days that there was no reason to fear an Italian thrust, became more acute as a result of the Mediterranean activities.

However, all of southeastern Europe was too wearied by recurrent war scares to show much emotion.

Defense preparations in Greece were pushed resolutely. King George II and his general staff will leave shortly for an inspection tour of frontier fortfications.

These include the "Metaxas Line," constructed along the Albanian frontier in the north after Italy's

Insults Start A Battle . . .

Basle, Switzerland, May 3 (AP).—French and German soldiers got so worked up over an exchange of loudspeaker insults from one line to the other that the nearest thing to a battle yet staged on the Rhine front continued for an hour tonight.

It started when the broadcaster on a German musical program which entertains the French through a loudspeaker departed from the usual insults to the British and compliments to the French to brag about the German victory in Norway.

This so excited the French broadcaster that he made uncomplimentary references about Adolf Hitler.

A German sharpshooter took a pot shot at the French loudspeaker with his rifle.

For an hour thereafter the whole sector north of Basle resounded with rifle, machinegun and heavy artillery fire.

Military observers estimated that at least $50,000 worth of ammunition was used up by both sides—and they doubted whether anyone in Germany's West Wall or France's Maginot Line even had been wounded.

U. S. Striving To Limit War, President Says

Roosevelt States Policy in Answer To Query on Italy

The United States is doing everything it can to prevent the spread of Europe's war to new areas, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

Declining to go into details or answer specific questions as to steps taken, Mr. Roosevelt stood on that bare assertion, after pointing out that this Government always had striven toward that objective.

The assurance was given when a reporter asked, at the President's press conference, whether the United States was doing anything to halt possible extension of the conflict. The question had reference to visits of American Ambassador William Phillips to Premier Mussolini in Rome, and Thursday's White House call by Prince Colonna, Italian Ambassador here. The reporter suggested that in the past this Government had taken steps with respect to "would-be belligerents."

Mr. Roosevelt later was asked

Revolt Aroused In Chamberlain's Party; Crisis Is Foreseen Tuesday

By Edwin Stout,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 3.—Great Britain tonight announced the abandonment of Namsos and central Norway to the Germans—an acknowledgement that added new force to unrest surging within the very foundations of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's government.

A communique telling of the end of the campaign to wrest southern Norway from the Germans said Allied troops still in the far northern Narvik area repulsed German counterattacks Wednesday and Thursday. It mentioned no operations there today.

"The Biggest Crisis"

Coming as it did within a day of the abandonment of Andalsnes, tonight's announcement quickened attacks on the Chamberlain government even from within its own ranks.

Clement Davies, member of the Liberal Nationals, who support the government declared:

"The country cannot be properly organized until the government goes."

Davies told of a meeting with a group of colleagues who thought as he did and decided to work against any vote of confidence during "the biggest crisis we ever had to face."

Day of Uncertainty

The terse war office communique announcing the Namsos withdrawal during last night, after a day of uncertainty in which Britons already had heard the news from Sweden and Germany, said the "reembarkation was carried out with complete success and without loss." (Norwegian reports said a German air bomb killed 30, wounded 60.)

It said the abandonment of the Namsos front, north of Germany-held Trondheim, was carried out "in accordance with the general plan of withdrawal from the immediate neighborhood of Trondheim."

It read very much like Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement yesterday telling of the withdrawal from Andalsnes to the south of Trondheim.

Despite tonight's announcement, a reliable military source earlier in the day had declared emphatically that Great Britain has "no intention of abandoning Norway."

Gloom nevertheless spread over the rooms of the Norwegian Lega-

Witness Describes Retreat After Day of 'Continuous Horror'

Formofoss, Norway, May 3 (By Telephone Via Stockholm).—Here in this little village some Norwegians are still holding out against enormous odds. But for that, I could not telephone this story. Raiders are above the building in which I am standing at this very moment.

German troops are not far away.

[A Stockholm dispatch indicated the German vanguard, en route to Namsos, had passed both Formofoss and Grong just after Muto telephoned his dispatch—Editor's note.]

All day I have been traveling from Namsos toward the Swedish frontier. I passed through Grong a few hours ago. I may reach the frontier in time.

I arrived at Namsos Wednesday night. At that time, I had no inkling that the Allies planned to evacuate. Passing through British outposts, I came upon French troops. I was surprised to find the air intense with suppressed excitement.

Soldiers Pack Hastily

French officers were shouting commands to soldiers who were hastily packing up their kits and marching off in formation.

I drove on another three miles and came on marching Poilus in full battle dress. They looked ghostly as they marched in the darkness from the demolished city. I

Retreat Cut Off When Allies Left Namsos, Says Communique

By Thomas F. Hawkins,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, May 3.—The expeditionary armies of the Allies today abandoned the whole of Norway below the Arctic Circle and the Norwegian central command, left to hold the line against the massive German war machine almost without bullets, bitterly gave up the fight and sued for an armistice to negotiate peace in the central area.

From the little town of Grong, on the Steinkjer-Namsos front above Trondheim, emptied of Allied troops in a startling two-day withdrawal and reembarkment, acting Norwegian commander Col. O. B. Getz sent word of the surrender in an order of the day surcharged with disillusionment.

He placed full blame for his plight on the Allies.

"Reasons Unknown to Us"

"The British and French—for reasons unknown to us—have given up helping us in our fight and have withdrawn their troops from Namsos," he said.

"We stand today alone against the entire German war machine, already outflanked and encircled on the line which the British and French should be holding . . . without aid from outside . . . with only enough ammunition for one day . . . without planes and other necessary war materials.

"Any further fighting would only lead to destruction, without serving any military purpose.

Contact for Peace

"I therefore am notifying the German military command to establish contact toward establishing peace in the Tronddlag area (all the area both north and south of Trondheim), as has been done in the southern part of the country.

"It is my heavy duty as acting commander of Tronddlag to give this notice to the soldiers under my command."

To this Col. Getz added:

"It was an incomprehensible action on the part of the British and French, without notifying me, to lay open my flanks in the rear so I was cut off from any possible retreat toward Mosjoen."

[A British war office communique issued early today said Getz's negotiation for an armistice was "obviously made without the authority" of the Norwegian high commander—Gen. Otto Ruge.

[Earlier, the war office denied that armistice negotiations had been opened. This apparently, was on the assumption that only Ruge could have dealt with the Germans, and he, according to the British early communique, had been evacuated with his staff from Namsos and had been taken to "somewhere in Norway."]

Germans Reported in Grong

German forces later were reported to have reached Grong and to have made contact with the Norwegians, with all fighting reported stopped.

[The United Press correspondent with Norwegian troops at Roros reported today new successes of German armies in that sector. He said the Nazi motorized legions had captured Storen from thinned ranks of defenders and were advancing rapidly on Roros, last important center of resistance in central Norway. Norwegian defense lines at Os, 7 miles south of Roros, also have yielded before Nazi on-

Institute Schools Lady Democrats in Some Winning Ways; Women Hear Debate on Government, Business and Labor

4,800 Are Taught The Platform Manner; Roosevelt Assists

Some 4,800 women, saluted by President Roosevelt as "fellow workers in the vineyard of knowledge," spent an arduous day yesterday learning how to make friends and influence political enemies.

In this task, as delegates to the Institute of Government, they had the full benefit of Government (Administration, to them) experts. And last night 4,800 notebooks were crammed with choice notes on speechmaking, column writing and all the best approved methods of getting votes.

In conference after conference, round-table forums and impromptu hotel lobby tete-a-tetes, it was strongly evident that the forthcoming political campaign, at least the Democratic side, is going to have a decidedly feminine flavor.

Shortly after dawn broke the Democratic women grouped in State parties, sipped breakfast coffee with their Congressmen—asking questions and hearing predictions of victory next fall.

Then they hurried to morning sessions at which Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of the Interior Ickes lectured on our great gold and other natural resources and what the Roosevelt Administration has done to develop them.

They left formal meetings in the afternoon to attend a White House garden party. Under gray skies and whatever coats they had brought with them, they shivered. But their hearts were warmed by the appearance on the south portico of President Roosevelt, and the congratulations on this "amazing and splendid outpouring" of delegates, which, he said, proved there is "tremendous enthusiasm for a continuation of liberal Democratic government in the United States." He also complimented them on an "honest wish to gain further knowledge of government."

Governmental Science Includes How to Sit And What to Say

Then last night they massed in Riverside Stadium—a classroom actually large enough to house all the students together—to hear political and business ringleaders debate the issues of Government-business cooperation.

They heard Attorney General Robert H. Jackson ridicule Administration opponents for charging the New Deal with ruining business. They listened to Henry I. Harriman, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, reply that government must recognize the desirability of the present system of free business enterprise.

They paid close attention to barrages of questions and retorts fired by other speakers, Senator James Mead, of New York, and Felix Morley, editor of The Post.

Thus the busy day went, while the influx of thousands of delegates when only a few hundred were expected continued to harass hotel men.

Advance arrangements for luncheons and dinners went awry and

Labor Board Told to Accept Dubious Cases

Edwin Smith Letter To Trial Examiners Revealed at Inquiry

By Hedley Donovan

Edwin S. Smith, National Relations Board member, was revealed yesterday to have urged a regional director to accept charges in cases where board jurisdiction was questionable in order to build up an impressive record of business transacted.

The advice was contained in a letter to Charles W. Hope, head of the board's Seattle office, placed in the record of the House committee investigating the NLRB.

Another letter made public yesterday led the committee into lively debate on the meaning of "raising hell."

"Bouncing Around"

Field Examiner Herbert J. Vogt identified correspondence in which he described himself as "bouncing around in the State of Iowa, trying to raise all the hell that possibly can be raised within the limits of our power."

The witness told the committee, "The expression does look pretty bad in cold print, but it was meant in more or less light vein."

Representative Abe Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, referring to some two pounds of Vogt's correspondence introduced as evidence by Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland, objected that "all this has nothing to do with the purpose of this committee."

Letter Called Relevant

Representative Harry Routzohn (Republican), of Ohio, insisted that the Vogt letter was relevant. "I assume this reference to raising hell has to do with his duties as an agent of the board rather than his personal conduct," he added.

The letter from Edwin Smith to Hope, written in 1935, included this illustration:

"If at the end of the month you have 100 charges and 50 of them have been withdrawn because of the complainant having decided that he really has no case, or because the matter has been settled, this looks like a substantial record of business done by the board.

"If, on the other hand, all you can say at the end of the month is that you have 50 charges but have disposed of a lot of other matters in which there were no formal charges, this looks as if the board were going out of its way to mix in a lot of cases in which it has no legal right . . ."

"Grip on Employer"

In a postscript Smith suggested that "you will have more of a grip on the employer if you can tell him a charge has been filed against his company and you are anxious to straighten the matter out."

Committee Counsel Edmund M. Toland asked if the board had not followed the policy of accepting "all kinds of charges" in order to point to a heavy volume of business and request larger appropriations from Congress.

"We had no such objective," Smith replied. He pointed that his letter to Hope was written five years ago, at a time when the extent of the board's jurisdiction was uncertain.

Letter From Ryan

Toland also read into the record a letter from Joseph P. Ryan, president of the A. F. of L. International Longshoremen's Union, to President Roosevelt, asserting that Smith called Harry Bridges "a great labor leader" in a speech at a special meeting of board employes.

Smith said the Ryan letter, dated September 3, 1937, was "completely false and malicious." He testified that his speech was a general report on a trip to the West Coast, based on interviews with employers and A. F. of L. and C. I. O. leaders.

Another document placed before the committee yesterday charged that Army and Navy officers had cooperated with five powerful firms to bring about "fascism" in the Hawaiian Islands. The assertion was made by E. J. Eagen, then an attorney in the board's Seattle office, in a confidential report to Smith three years ago.

Army Intelligence

Eagen reported after his return from a survey trip that the "Big Five" controlled banks, plantations, shipping, police, courts and political machinery in the islands.

"The sugar interests believe that anyone who engages in union activities is an undesirable person, and they very cautiously impart their information to the Army and Navy intelligence units," he wrote. "If there is any truer picture of fascism anywhere in the world, then I do not know the definition of it."

Eagen identified the "Big Five" as American Factors, C. Brewer & Co., Ltd., Alexander Baldwin, Castle & Cook, Ltd., and T. H. Davies & Co., Ltd.

Whelchel Pleads He Was 'Indiscreet'

Gainesville, Ga., May 3 (U.P.).—Representative B. Frank Whelchel (Democrat), of Georgia, told a Federal jury today that "maybe an indiscretion, but not an intent to violate the law" was responsible for the Government charging he sold postal appointments.

Whelchel admitted his "indiscretion" after a three-hour session in the witness chair. He described as "campaign contributions" the money paid to him by constituents seeking his recommendation for Federal jobs.

"I have not sold a route or a postoffice. I would not if I could, and if I had, I would have gone about it differently. I have not intended doing a wrong and it may be an indiscretion but not an intent to violate the law."

many who held tickets to eat were forced to partake of sandwiches at the nearest drug store.

Only at the White House did the jam that has become so much a part of this institute fail to develop. For this the chill and gloomy afternoon was blamed. Loyal workers who went sat huddled behind pulled up collars while the President spoke. They cheered him, and rushed forward to greet Mrs. Roosevelt when she descended the steps to mingle with them on the lawn. Others took advantage of her invitation to "wander through the first two floors." Still others admired the lovely tulips, daffodils and magnolias that dressed the garden, or listened to the music of the scarlet-coated Marine Band.

But three tables of fruit punch and 13,750 small cakes prepared for an expected 5,000 guests was hardly touched. When the last guest had left the checker's clock registered 2,931.

The President, who began his speech with the greeting, "fellow workers of the vineyard of knowledge," said the country is beginning to "differentiate between fact and fiction" and "we do not fall as easily as in older days for glittering generalities, for specious promises."

A "Horrid Dilemma"

He challenged candidates in the coming campaign to "quit condemning each and every act of this Administration and tell us just how you would change the laws if you were in power."

He referred to major Administration policies and asked how the critics would change them specifically. He said certain types of candidates will be placed in a "horrid dilemma" by those questions in the next six months.

While congratulating the women on their enthusiasm and welcoming their support of a liberal Democratic government in the coming campaign, the President gave them absolutely no information on a point their pencils were all set to note—his third-term intentions.

Administration critics took another lashing from Attorney General Jackson at last night's meeting. Addressing the women on "Business and Government Have Worked Together" he offered statistics designed to show the teamwork was producing results.

Cites Profits

A recent letter of the National City Bank, he reported, listed the profits of 2,480 companies. The average profit for all had been 6.2 per cent. Public utilities in the group was 6.9 per cent and of trade corporations 11.3 per cent.

"Now I would like to hear these candidates say what they think these corporations ought to earn if 6 per cent to 11 per cent represents ruin," he said. "What rate of profit do they think our economy can afford to pay these corporations and what is a fair rate of profit with interest rates at their present level and employment and national income down?"

Answering critics who say that the Wagner Act and the Wage-Hour Act are evidence of Administration hostility to business, Jackson said: "We still have Stone Age mentalities who think that the way to lift business is to keep labor down."

Harriman Answers

Harriman said business must recognize "great and unexplored frontiers in science and technology"—that "daily the ability of man to produce more is increasing"—that "this means a greater interdependence of each group and each individual on other groups and other individuals."

But, he argued, the desirability of free business enterprise must be recognized by Government and Government must appreciate that "free enterprise can only be carried on if it has the spur of profits, not meager profits, but large profits to compensate for its many and inevitable losses."

He said "any effort to limit the profits of industry to 3 per cent, or even 6 per cent in the face of its inevitable losses is to sound the death knell of private enterprise and to herald the advent of state socialism."

Senator Mead, discussing labor and its relations with the Government, said the relationship had been pleasant.

"It's not enough to say we're on labor's side, or that labor's on our side," he said, "but rather we're both on the same liberal side.

"We're going to improve the liberal formula," he promised.

Representative Mary Norton, moderator, told the women of her party that "1940 is going to show the Democrats in the greatest victory they have ever had.

Hopes for Third Term

"I hope," she said, that President Roosevelt will be the leader."

Editor Morley, taking the point of view of the independent voter, declared "it is not a question if Government and Business can cooperate, but rather that of Government and Business must cooperate."

Emphasizing that a democratic government must have accumulation as well as distribution, he pointed out the importance of balancing the budget.

In his address to the women, Secretary Morgenthau defended the Government's gold policy and said the American dollar is the "soundest unit of currency in the world."

It was the Secretary's first important public speech in two years. He expressed the conviction that democracy would survive present world conditions and that gold would remain the medium of international payments.

Secretary Ickes characterized conservation as the "outstanding domestic problem before the American people" and said that President Roosevelt, amid a world struggle for raw materials, "is the greatest conservator of natural resources in American history."

Jurist Upholds Right of Minorities To Freedom From 'Unreasonable Search,' Says Records Must Not Be Used in Action

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 3.—Agents of the Dies Congressional Committee Investigating Un-American Activities acted illegally in raiding Philadelphia headquarters of the Communist Party and International Workers Order, a Federal judge ruled today in an opinion vigorously defending rights of a minority.

District Judge George A. Welsh upheld the complaint of Carl Reeve, Communist candidate for the United States Senate from Pennsylvania, and Frank Hellman, district I. W. O. organizer. They contended the raids April 2, by George F. Hurley and Chester Howe, Dies agents, and Police Lieut. Albert Granitz on warrants issued by Magistrate Jacob Dogole violated their civil liberties.

Judge Welsh said, in his opinion, "No good reason exists why the right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure should not stand upon a parity today with the freedom of religion, of speech, of press and of assembly, as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights."

In Washington Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, announced his committee would appeal the decision immediately. Dies added that if defeated in court, he would introduce a bill to give Congressional committees the right to obtain records of organizations "trying to overthrow the Government."

Judge Welsh did not rule whether records confiscated should be returned to Reeve and Hellman as they requested. He said, however, that if any of the seized papers were seditious, they could not be used against either group since their seizure was illegal. Reeve and Hellman have contended there was nothing subversive in the papers.

Specifically the jurist decided the raids were illegal because the affidavit signed before Magistrate Dogole was based on "information and belief" and "without any personal knowledge of the searching officers."

Roosevelt To Furlough Old Admirals

President Announces Plan to Rejuvenate Fleet Commands

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

In an effort to bring younger men to important fleet commands, President Roosevelt yesterday announced he would furlough several of the Navy's older rear admirals.

He said he would consult with the chief of naval operations, the commander in chief of the Fleet and the Battle Force commander, and then place some of the present rear admirals on half-pay furloughs with a view to forcing them to apply for retirement.

Mr. Roosevelt warned against making any hasty conclusions from the German victory in Norway that airplanes had gained supremacy over warships or other weapons. He declared the War and Navy departments were keeping in closest possible touch with the war and applying lessons to our new defense equipment, but very little data was available.

Request Made at Press Conference

His statement was in response to a request at his press conference for comment on Secretary Edison's declaration that planes had obtained a "temporary advantage" over war vessels and that the topsides of future ships must be basically redesigned to prevent exploding bombs from killing seamen and "disorganizing" control points.

He also said he did not intend to ask Congress for additional funds for national defense at this session, but added he would interpose no objection if Congress saw fit to do so.

The President revealed his plan to rejuvenate the high command in vetoing a bill which would have set up a board to "pluck" admirals for retirement. He said he could accomplish the same end by exercising his existing power as commander in chief of the armed forces and indicated he might go even farther than was proposed by Congress.

The bill would have required the appointment of a "plucking board" in any year there were not nine vacancies in the grade of rear admiral. The board would have picked enough admirals for forcible retirement to assure this number of vacancies. Testimony before Congress was that the proviso would require three admirals to be "plucked" this summer.

Mr. Roosevelt said in his veto message that he might furlough one or two admirals in addition to these. He said he "fully aproved of speeding up retirement of rear admirals and Marine generals "to create a quicker flow of promotion for younger men" but did not want it made mandatory legislation at this time "because of the extremely difficult and uncertain status of international relations."

He also objected to another provision of the bill which would have directed the retention on active duty of eight naval fliers scheduled for retirement June 30. He said it would be discriminatory against other officers, but he intended to keep the eight and most of the others in active service anyway. A proviso that would have increased the retired pay of Brig. Gen. James J. Meade by $1,500 a year, he said he would approve in a separate bill.

Garand Rifle Test Set

When questioned about the plane-warship controversy, Mr. Roosevelt declared the two types were interdependent and complimentary. He drew upon his store of naval history to show that other weapons, the iron-clad ship and the submarine, for example, had been publicly hailed at one time as invincible and making other weapons obsolete. Later, he emphasized, a defense against them was developed.

Chairman Thomas of the Senate military appropriations subcommittee announced that a test of the Army's new Garand semiautomatic would be staged for members of Congressional, military and naval committees at Fort Belvoir, Va., May 9, in competition with Johnson and other semiautomatic weapons.

Taft Assails Federal Rule Of Advertising

Says It May Become A Stepping Stone To Control of News

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., May 3.—Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, urged citizens today to "throw away the Government spending fallacy, and stimulate production by the use of advertising and other methods."

If this is done, he told the advertising affiliation, composed of clubs in 13 cities of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Ontario, "there is no reason why we should not go on to a better national income, to a higher standard of life than we have ever enjoyed, and to a condition in which every man who wants a job can get a job."

The Republican Presidential candidate asserted "the acts of the present Administration indicate a yearning for Government control and regulation of advertising."

"The danger is that the Government control in this industry, as in so many others, will so tie down and slow up the whole process of running the machinery that the machinery will never run," he added.

"If the Government gets the power to tell every newspaper what it shall put in its advertising columns, it is only a short step before it will be telling every newspaper what it shall put in its news columns and in its editorial columns. The resentment of the New Dealers against advertising seems to be part of their general resentment against all the newspapers for the criticism which has been showered on so many experiments."

Senator Taft told a press conference he "will have more delegates on the first ballot than anyone else" at the party's national convention.

Taft also said that "if President Roosevelt is renominated, he will be the easiest Democrat to defeat."

House Shelves Pay-Hour Changes

of turmoil, evoked bitter comments from some House veterans who privately said that their colleagues were "behaving like schoolboys."

Called "Disgraceful Spectacle"

"This is probably the most disgraceful spectacle the Congress has engaged in in the 12 years I have been a member of this body," shouted Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, adding that actions of the House were not those of a Congress, but of a "chaotic group of men."

McCormack asserted that most of the amendments which had been "loaded" onto the Norton bill were "emotional," springing from men who were politically "on the spot." He charged that efforts were being made "to sabotage one of the finest pieces of legislation ever enacted."

As the final vote on the amendments neared, the House became increasingly unruly. Speakers were interrupted with shouts of "Vote! Vote!" which, in turn, were silenced by the sharp crack of the gavel wielded by Representative Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois.

Even Representative Ramspeck, mild-mannered Georgia Democrat, became visibly irritated when, although he had declined to yield, he was interrupted by Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin.

Told to "Sit Down"

"Sit down," Ramspeck snapped with unaccustomed acerbity; and Schafer sat.

The amendment in question, proposed by Schafer and attacked by Ramspeck, would have forbidden importation of foreign goods unless they were produced under the same wage-hour standards as in this country. It was defeated, 75 to 121.

Earlier in the day—before throwing out all the amendments as a whole which it had approved one by one—the House tentatively indorsed a proposal of Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, exempting employes of wholesale establishments from the hours provisions of the law.

House Reorganization Chief Defends Plan to Shift CAA

Cochran Says Civil Aviation Should Have Cabinet Representation Through Transfer to the Commerce Department

Rallying to the defense of President Roosevelt's plan to transfer the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department, Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the select House Committee on reorganization, last night declared defeat of the Executive's proposal would be a "distinct set-back for civil aviation."

Cochran, in a Nation-wide radio address, concurred with a recent assertion by Mr. Roosevelt, scoring his critics, by declaring:

"This proposal has given rise to a great deal of criticism which, unfortunately, is based upon misinformation and faulty assumptions but which, if permitted to go unchallenged, may carry some weight and tend to defeat the proposal."

The Missourian spoke soon after the Chief Executive and made public an analysis by counsel of the Budget Bureau and the Justice Department to bolster his contention that the transfer would perpetuate the agency's independene.

Cites Roosevelts' Flying

Alluding to the recent self-designation of a group of outstanding airline pilots as the "lobby to save lives," in opposition to abolition of the airsafety board, which is part of the President's proposal, Cochran, also a member of the Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments, said:

"Probably no family in the United States is a more liberal patron of the airlines than the President's family. There is hardly a day that some member of his family is not traveling by air. Can anyone conceive that the President is not interested in air safety?"

Pointing out that civil aviation promises to become a billion dollar industry soon, Cochran said this should justify its having "representation at Cabinet meetings" through the Commerce Secretary.

Functions Remain

Cochran said that although the Air Safety Board would be abolished, its functions would not be, since they would be merely transferred to the Civil Aeronautics Board.

As foes of the plan prepared for a Senate showdown next week on the issue, Budget Director Smith declared the independent status of the authority would remain unimpaired and said that Attorney General Jackson concurred in this opinion.

Germany Accuses Britain of Plotting Thrust in Balkans or Mediterranean

Clamor Recalls Outcry Before War in Norway

Northern Victory Is Just a 'Dress Rehearsal,' Say Nazis

By Joseph W. Grigg, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 3 (U.P.).—Germany today accused Britain of plotting to extend the war to the Mediterranean and Balkans and warned that the crushing Nazi victory in Norway was only a "dress rehearsal for the last decisive stage of the war" for which Adolf Hitler stands ready.

"We will counter British aggression with lightning action," a Nazi spokesman said, promising that the Allies will suffer the same catastrophic defeat" which they encountered in Norway.

"We will get there first and stay there, wherever it may be. The Norwegian campaign was in the full sense of the word a dress rehearsal for the last decisive stage of the war upon whose threshold we stand."

Called Threat to Italy

Nazi leaders called the dispatch of the British and French battlefleets to the Mediterranean a threat to Italy and added that "Italy very likely has taken the necessary steps."

The entire Berlin press took up the clamor against what it called Britain's aggressive intentions. The outburst bore striking resemblance to the propaganda campaign about five weeks ago, the theme of which was the claim that Britain had designs on Scandinavia.

The newspaper Der Angriff expanded its headlines and symbolized the whole chorus of press comment in a front page editorial which said:

"One thing is quite clear: England has aggressive intentions. All the measures it has taken in the Mediterranean are unjustified. The attitude neither of Italy nor of any other state was aggressive. Therefore we need to search no further for the answer to the question of what Britain wants in the Mediterranean area is obvious: New theaters of war."

Hitler Addresses Forces

Professed alarm over the Mediterranean situation pushed out of the limelight the jubilation over German successes in Norway. Interest was captured but not appeased by skimpy reports of a speech which Chancellor Hitler made to a closed assemblage of 6,000 members of the army, air force and SS officers corps at the Berlin Sports Palace.

Hitler, according to the only sentence of his talk released for publication, paraphrased Shakespeare's words in Hamlet, "To be, or not to be: that is the question," in saying the present war is "a fight for being, or not being, of the German people."

Informed quarters said Germany stands ready to give a military account of herself on every possible sector.

Germany also was portrayed as missing no opportunity for strengthening her position in the southeast. It was reported from Bucharest that Herbert Goering, a cousin of Field Marshal Goering, is in the Rumanian capital seeking conferences with King Carol.

Germans expressed a belief that in event of British action in the Mediterranean, Hungary would permit the passage of German troops.

Troops Mass in Slovakia

[An Associated Press dispatch from Budapest stated Czech refugees arriving there today (Saturday) declared that German mechanized in large numbers are concentrated in Slovakia along the Hungarian border at points from which they could make a quick dash into the Balkans.

[It was reported also that more than 100,000 "lightning troops" were concentrated at Bruck on the Vienna-Budapest Railway line.]

Mitchell Deplores Communist Drive Among Colored

By the Associated Press

All but buried by the tumult of House debate over what changes to make in the wage-hour law was a speech by Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, the only colored member of Congress, deploring communistic activities among his race.

The House listened with interest. What he said was:

Subversive influences are at work among the Negroes. Communists are trying to disrupt the good feelings between the two races in this country. Designing white men are trying to use colored as a tool against the Government.

And he concluded:

"I wish to go on record as thoroughly disapproving the appeal made to the Negro at this National Negro Congress by the labor leader, John L. Lewis. It is my opinion that John L. Lewis is the most dangerous, outstanding leader in America today, and it is his desire to change our form of government and to establish a dictatorship in America."

Television Goes 717 Miles, Sets New U. S. Record

New York, May 3 (AP).—A new American record for long-distance television reception was announced today by the National Broadcasting Co. Images flashed from the top of the Empire State Building by Station W2XBS were picked up in Chicago 717 air miles distant.

After 16 minutes the sound and image disappeared although the program continued here for 11 additional minutes.

Reception normally is limited to within 90 miles of the midtown transmitter. Engineers said the phenomenon was due to a "sporadic layer" in the upper atmosphere which "bounced" the waves back.

U. S. Crew and Captain Disagree on Whose Guns Raked Their Vessel at Bergen

Bullets Spattered Freighter's Decks; Another Ship Hit

By John A. Moroso, 3d,
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 3.—The little American freighter Flying Fish, her deck plates pitted by bullets as mementos of the German-British battle for Bergen, returned home today with master and crew in sharp dispute as to which side had fired upon her.

All agreed, however, that the bullets which struck the Flying Fish and another American vessel, the Charles R. McCormick — cutting away the latter's mast stays and wire rigging—had been fired either by accident or by mistakes in the identities of the targets.

Speaking for 15 fellow seamen, hopeful of receiving $250 bonuses by contending that they were under fire, George Gilbert declared unequivocally that it was an Allied plane that, on April 12, loosed three bursts of machine gun fire upon the Flying Fish, making her maiden voyage.

Capt. W. W. Wollaston insisted, just as flatly, that his ship was struck accidentally by shells from a Norwegian land battery which had been seized by the invading Germans.

"I was on the bridge," he said, "and I saw everything that happened." He was supported by some of the 32 other crew members.

"We wish to settle this question once and for all," Gilbert said, "with all due respect to our captain (who, we understand, was below decks when the incident occurred), we, the members of the crew who were on the fo'c'sle-head and the foredeck wish to emphatically state that the fire came from the plane and no mistake about it.

"We had the privilege of enjoying a grandstand seat and saw and heard the whole performance. The plane fired three distinct bursts and was flying so low that there could be no possibility of error on this point. Examination of the spent cartridges later picked up on deck will prove them to be of machine-gun caliber."

Gilbert—who, along with the 15 other seamen who supported him, is a member of the C. I. O.'s National Maritime Union — declared that the plane had "headed directly" for the Flying Fish, and that its fire puntured about ten drums of tool oil on the fore deck, all of which were "heaved overboard."

Chester Shimp, of Baltimore, chief engineer, and the vessel's log, both supported the Gilbert contention.

Italy Cautious Amid Tension; Warns Allies

Press Criticizes Fleet Maneuvers, Stresses Mediterranean Stand

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 3.—Italy, as though anxious to avoid war, displayed official caution tonight amidst tension over the Mediterranean which extended from Athens to Washington.

The Italian tendency was to treat as unnecessary the maneuverings of Allied war fleets in the Mediterranean, now at Alexandria, as well as diplomatic attempts to keep the war from being spread by Italian action.

Authorities declined to comment on Athens' reports that Italian troops, ships and planes had been massed in Italy's Dodecanese Islands in the eastern Mediterranean.

Although officials said the "defeat" of the Allies in Norway demonstrated the German theory of Blitzkrieg, in which the winner is the one who moves faster than his foe, there was nothing in Rome to indicate that Italians might try it themselves.

Meanwhile, there is no improvement in the attitude of the press, which is as strongly pro-German as ever. Apart from the very critical and uncomplimentary comments on Britain for her reverses in Norway, there is today a direct warning in some newspapers that Italy will not tolerate much longer the Allies' control of the Mediterranean.

Press Is Pro-German

The Corriere Padano, Marshal Italo Balbo's newspaper, says that "the British state may hold the keys to the Mediterranean—but they are false keys."

"They have not yet understood that Italy is too proud and independent a nation to bear the insufferable obstacles placed by the British blockade to its sea-going traffic, which is for the Italian people the basis of its work and of its life. It is for this reason that the Mediterranean is life for Italy, while for Britain—as she herself is obliged to admit with her recent naval measures—it is only a comfortable short cut."

Chamberlain Commended

All the press prints Chamberlain's speech almost in full, and some editorials express amazement over the "British premier's courage not to soften the military disaster suffered by the British troops in Norway."

There is some admiration, for instance, in today's Popolo di Roma for Chamberlain's frankness and also surprise that "a government which is compelled to confess so openly to failure of its military and political actions may still remain in power."

U. S. Is Helping To Woo Italy, Paris Reports

Rome Conversations Said to Hold Out Economic Allurements

By Taylor Henry,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, May 3.—Semiofficial French sources indicated tonight that as a result of conversations between the United States and Italy, a new Allied campaign is on the offing to woo Italy away from Germany with economic benefits.

The Telefrance News Agency, after stressing the risk Italy would run if she entered the war on the side of the Nazis, declared:

"An attitude of neutrality clearly and definitely affirmed would, without in any way touching Italian prestige, safeguard her from this risk and permit her to play the role which belongs to her in the Mediterranean basin after all the tension and distrust disappears."

The agency added the warning that "if, thanks to the Washington Government, Italy is led to define her position with more clearness, we hope she will be convinced of the necessity—if she wants to continue certain vital and traditional relations with the democratic powers in Europe and on the other side of the Atlantic—of practicing a strict policy of neutrality."

The idea of an economic deal which would ease the tension in the Mediterranean by changing Italy's status from that of a nonbelligerent into one of strict neutrality was put forth in identical phraseology by both Telefrance and Havas, also a French news agency.

On the war front, meanwhile, the Allies are strengthening their forces in far northern Norway with British units withdrawn from Andalsnes and French Alpine Chasseurs, Paris spokesmen said as the French nation was warned against pessimism as a result of the Allied abandonment of southern and central Norway.

The war office announced the arrival near German-held Narvik today of the famous "Blue Devils" who first reached Norwegian soil at Namsos on April 19.

The war office spokesman would not confirm or deny unofficial reports that the British withdrawn from the area south of Trondheim had been taken to the Narvik sector, but he did say that "additional strategic shifting of troops was possible," and that such shifts were more practical by boat than over Norway's poor roads.

Death Vetoes Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, May 3.—Yesterday President Roosevelt signed a bill which was intended to prevent the separation of an American-born soldier, who fought for Canada in the World War, and his Canadian-born wife.

Today the woman disclosed that death separated them January 1.

"He killed himself; I guess he just couldn't stand it any longer," said 38-year-old Mrs. Fred W. Buchholz.

Thus in almost unnoticed tragedy was ended the case of the 45-year-old war veteran which last year drew Nation-wide attention.

Because Buchholz stabbed himself to death in a private sanitarium in a county where he was not a resident, his death passed unchronicled for four months.

The Buchholzes were married in Canada, where six of their children were born. The three others were born after they came to Los Angeles in 1932. Because Mrs. Buchholz entered the country on a temporary visa, the Labor Department ordered her deportation.

American Legion officials got behind a legislative move to prevent the family's separation. Yesterday, the President signed the necessary bill.

"It (the bill which stretched a point in the immigration law) doesn't mean much to me now," sadly reflected Mrs. Madeline Vera Buchholz today. "I guess I've lost the capacity for feeling things like I used to."

President Seeks To Confine War

whether he had received any assurances from the Italian Ambassador which would bear out reports of the peaceful tone of Mussolini's statement to Phillips when Mussolini was understood in Rome to have said that Italy had no intention of getting into the war at present.

Again the President responded merely by saying that the United States Government was continuing to work for peace.

A flurry of speculation as to a possible peace move by the country was occasioned later when the President was host at luncheon to Henry L. Stimson, Republican former Secretary of State, and Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter. Stimson frequently has supported phases of the Roosevelt foreign policies and has called for action against "militarized aggression."

"Just Two Old Friends"

Both of the guests insisted, however, that they were "just two old friends visiting the President" and denied the call had any significance.

Acting Secretary of State Welles, at his press conference, cautioned against speculating on the Italian situation. He branded press reports from Rome, purporting to give the substance of Phillips conversations, as "newspaper speculation."

He reiterated that Americans in Italy had not been warned to leave there. Some 19,000 Americans are temporarily residing in Italy and about 21,000 in nearby Mediterranean countries.

President Roosevelt's departure late last night for Hyde Park, N. Y., for the week-end, and Secretary of State Hull's absence on a rest trip to Atlantic City indicated there would be little public activity here in regard to the war situation, though the President and Hull will keep in closest touch with the State Department.

Phillips Visits Taylor

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, May 3.—While the press was crowing over the Allied withdrawal from Norway, William Phillips, the American Ambassador, showed a certain degre of optimism by leaving this afternoon for Florence "to rest over the week-end" as a guest of Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's envoy to the Vatican.

Phillips left a few hours after Taylor, who had been in Rome for a few days, had gone to Florence. The departure of the two American representatives who have held frequent conversations this week gave rise to the unconfirmed report that Phillips' visit to Premier Mussolini and Count Ciano had been prompted by a peace proposal on the part of President Roosevelt, who intended to ask the support of the Holy See.

Both Sides in War Imperialistic, Clergyman Says

"The Allies have themselves betrayed the cause of democracy; England has out-Hitlerized Hitler," the Rev. George A. Ackerly last night told 50 members of the Mother's Day peace committee at a meeting in Foundry Methodist Church.

The Rev. Mr. Ackerly, assistant pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregation, called the European war one between rival imperialistic forces rather than between forces of light and evil.

The committee also heard Miss Kathleen Lewis, president of the C. I. O. Women's Auxiliary, urge protests against making loans or sending aid to Europe "to prevent a war-born depression greater than the collapse of 1929."

British Magazine Declares Planes Will Excel Warships

Article Discusses Results of First 8 Months of War

By the United Press

London, May 3.—The authoritative British aviation magazine, Aeroplane, claimed tonight that the first eight months of the European war indicate that bombing planes eventually will prove superiority over the warship.

The magazine article, of outstanding significance because of Britain's reliance on her fleet, said that although no capital ship has been put out of action by an air attack the fundamental point remains—ships can be hit by bombs.

"That having been established," the magazine said, "the old problem remains a contest between power offensive weapons and defensive armor. Just at this moment armor seems to be top. That is not likely to remain.

"We hear already that the Germans are developing some far more lethal forms of bombs in the hope of turning hits into sinkings. More than ever is command of the air necessary to the Allies.

"This war started with the air forces held back in second place. It may finish with air power the only factor that matters."

The article said that British planes bombed and sank one German warship, torpedoed and probably sank another and bombed and damaged six more while German planes sank one British warship and damaged eight others.

The magazine article added that all ships hit by British planes were anchored while only four ships bombed by the Germans were anchored.

Allies, Nazis Still Face Air Strength Test, Says Expert

By Devon Francis.
Associated Press Aviation Editor.

New York, May 3.—Gambling on the efficacy of air power in the presence of vastly superior enemy naval strength, Germany to all intents and purposes has achieved in Norway a military advantage strikingly similar to the one the Nazis posted in Poland last fall.

Seizure of all the good Norwegian airports at the start of the invasion, and intensive bombing of air bases the Allies tried to establish as well as the seaports they seized, provided the key to local German air superiority.

Evaluating the German claims of success, which are buttressed by Prime Minister Chamberlain's tacit admissions yesterday, means fighting off the temptation to give the German air force too much credit for the job done.

Yet it cannot be denied that the Germans have used their warplanes as effectively as the best of the tactical books would dictate.

Moreover, in token of the lessons learned about the use of air power to date, Secretary Edison of the Navy discloses that this country is considering alteration of its warships to withstand air attacks such as British sea power has suffered.

Neutral military opinion stresses two points: That the air power of the Allies and of Germany has not yet met a test of strength and that little has been decided about the vulnerability of navies to warplane fleets.

Refused to Answer Questions Before Dies Committee

Five Communists who refused to answer questions before the Dies Committee were indicted on charges of contempt of the House by the District Grand Jury yesterday.

With silence the men balked inquiry about the membership and organization of the Communist Party in Pittsburgh, Washington, Maryland and Massachusetts. Should they be convicted they would face sentences of at least one month to one year in jail, and fines of $100 to $1,000.

The indictments, presented before Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District Court, named George Powers, Communist Party secretary for Western Pennsylvania; James H. Dolsen, Pittsburgh party secretary; Philip Frankfield, Massachusetts party secretary; Thomas F. Patary; Philip Frankfeld, Massachusetts Young Communist League, and Dr. Albert Blumberg, party secretary for Maryland and the District.

National Bank Receiver Exempted From Tax

Daily Worker's Editor Found Guilty of Libel

New York, May 3 (AP).—Clarence Hathaway, editor of the Communist Daily Worker, was convicted of criminal libel tonight.

He was tried on charges by Mrs. Edith Liggett, widow of Walter Liggett, slain Minneapolis editor, that she and the memory of her husband were defamed by articles appearing in the Communist newspaper.

Moscow Radio Announces Accord With Germany Over Swedish Neutrality

'Interests' Are Mutual, Russians Say

Stockholm Reported Opening Negotiations For Soviet Trade Pact

By the United Press

London, May 3.—Russia and Germany have agreed on their mutual "interest" in the preservation of Sweden's neutrality as result of negotiations conducted last week, the Moscow radio announced tonight.

The Moscow announcement coincided with disclosure by well-informed Swedish quarters in London that Sweden, isolated from the Western World by Germany's Norwegian conquest has opened trade negotiations with Russia.

The Stockholm government also has asked Germany for use of the Kiel Canal, between the Baltic and North seas, as a channel for Swedish trade with the United States and presumably with Latin America, it was stated reliably.

The Moscow radio announcement regarding Sweden's neutrality and Soviet-German interest in it followed Stockholm dispatches indicating that Sweden will now come more and more under Chancellor Hitler's influence following the Allied withdrawal from central and southern Norway.

The Russian radio said that "both parties verified that both governments are interested in the preservation of Sweden's neutrality."

The Moscow consultations were undertaken, it was explained, in conformity with the German-Soviet pact of last August providing for mutual consultation and exchange of information on developments in the German and Russian spheres.

The broadcast denounced, as untrue, reports in "a number of foreign newspapers . . . that Russia sent to the German government last week a note in which the Soviet government announced that it would regard action by Germany in Sweden as unfriendly."

"Besides this," the radio continued, "foreign newspapers reported that Russia had announced to Germany that it could not permit the occupation of the Aaland Islands (at the entrance of the Gulf of Bothnia between Sweden and Finland) by Germany. These reports do not conform with the truth."

Eyewitness Tells Of Namsos Retreat

saw them disappear toward the harbor.

I went to the Spillun Inn, the only surviving hostelry left standing, where I sought a night's lodging. As I entered the door I was immediately challenged by two British military officers who demanded to know how I got there and what my business was.

I knew I had landed in the middle of a very serious situation and a big story. But I still had no clew to its true significance and what was to follow.

I was under arrest for some time, but was treated with great courtesy, then released upon giving my word of honor not to attempt to report anything I had seen until further orders were given by the military authorities.

At 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning antiaircraft guns on the heights surrounding the ruined, battered town, kept up a steady barrage of gunfire against German planes. It lasted all day.

This was not a series of air raids, but one long, continuous horror.

But British warships and transport ships crept up the fjord all day in spite of the bombs. Men were busy packing up gear. During Thursday evening I was told that the last of the French troops already had gone. The British were leaving immediately.

Darkness fell. We waited tensely. Midnight came. I was then brought before British officers and given the choice of either accompanying the British force aboard a warship or remaining at Namsos at my own risk and taking a chance of being captured by the Germans.

I told them I would rather stay behind. They said I could not leave the harbor dock until the last British soldier had been put aboard ship and sailed away. I agreed.

Troops Are Disappointed

Then a steady stream of British soldiers began to move down the harbor side. They were bitterly disappointed at not having had a crack at the Germans. One of the soldiers told me:

"We are sick and tired of these darned Jerries (German planes) coming over here all day long. We are without any fighters to send up against them."

The evacuation of the British troops, as well as the French, took place in perfect order and without incident. The soldiers stepped into small launches in the flickering light of the fires that were burning in Namsos for days as a result of incendiary bombs.

Because of that no blackout was possible and the German bombers would have had a picnic if they had chosen that moment for an air raid.

But it was carried out with such secrecy that no word could have reached Britain's enemy. Even those natives who were left in Namsos were as much surprised as I had been. I did not leave the scene, according to orders, until the last soldier had gone. As I made my way to the battered and much-bombed automobile road to Grong, I saw that the Allies had left behind stores of food and other materials.

All cars and trucks were requisitioned later by the Norwegian authorities and the supplies taken away before the Germans could arrive.

One British soldier was left behind. He was an antiaircraft gunner. The Norwegians took charge of him. By this time I think he is safely over the Swedish border.

The Anglo-French troops left with honor, leaving behind a record of tough, dogged resistance and cool and unhurried discipline. The men had been fighting and marching for a fortnight. They gave the Germans some rough handling. But in the end it was found impossible for the Allies to land munitions and supplies and maintain forces in this area.

The whole harbor had been under almost constant bombardment. When at last its quays were little more than a heap of stones and it would have been out of the question to land men and materials, the British troops made the retreat from Namsos in good order and without severe losses.

They behaved as though they were carrying out just another troop movement from Aldershot to Heath. No hurry. No fuss.

Norwegians Cover Withdrawal

The Norwegian action made the withdrawal a success. They covered the Allies by holding the roads between Steinkjer, Namsos and Lake Snaasa. But they will be unable to hold the roads long against the hammer blows of Nazi troops.

With me at Namsos were three Americans—one reporter and two newsreel men. My American colleagues left on a British warship.

I stood on a smashed quay and waved good-by.

Then, I made my way through Namsos, past ruins of houses and skeletons of buildings ground to the earth as if by a giant hand. And now I am getting on the road again—for Sweden.

Defeat Stirs Chamberlain's Own Party

tion and the ominous word "submission" was heard there for the first time.

Evidence that the British plan was to transfer at least some troops to other Norwegian areas was seen, however, in a statement issued tonight to this effect:

"Maj. Gen. Paget, in his plan for the evacuation of Andalsnes, proposed to transfer with the British forces all the Norwegian troops which the Norwegian high command decided could best be employed in other areas. The necessary instructions were given to accede to this request, but it is not known yet in London how many have in fact thus been transferred."

Britain struck by air at Nazi bases at Ry, Denmark, Fornebu, near Oslo and Stavanger and the admiralty flashed a "We are proud of our fleet air arm."

These failed, however, to divert London from the crux of the situation — further withdrawals from Norway.

Even the news that the Allied fleet had slipped into Alexandria raised hardly a ripple in diplomatic and military circles.

Adding his voice to Davies, Richard K. Law, member of Parliament for staunchly conservative Hull, opened fire on the government "attitude to the problem" which, he said, "must be changed before the country is in sight of victory."

Warns Against Smugness

This son of Bonar Law, who led the Conservative Party under Asquith, derided "widespread and highly dangerous delusions that the war is going to win itself without loss or sacrifice, that time is on our side and that Hitler has missed the bus."

The "miss the bus" phrase is from Chamberlain's April 4 speech and already has been thrown in his face by Liberal Leader Sir Archibald Sinclair.

Thus for the first time since the start of the war members of Parliament themselves showed there were signs of active rebellion against Chamberlain in his own Conservative Party.

This is highly important, since neither Labor nor the opposition Liberals have enough votes to overthrow the government and any change must come with connivance of members of the government ranks.

"That's where the only chance of a successful rebellion lies," said one member. "Comment of Conservative members was vicious after Chamberlain's statement yesterday of the withdrawal from Andalsnes and much now depends on Capt. Henry Margesson, the chief government whip."

Should Margesson, the Conservatives' chief strategist, decide to shift loyalty to some other member of the party, even First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill—long anathema to Margesson—Chamberlain might be beaten, some members declared.

Needs a Victory

Informed circles believed tonight that unless a signal victory for British arms is announced before next Tuesday the fate of Chamberlain and his government hangs on statements then by the prime minister and Churchill and the debate which is to follow.

A Norwegian source, previously optimistic, heard the news the British had left Namsos and then declared hopes for Norway's independence were evaporating with the smoke of the departing British transports.

"We are left with no choice but submission," he admitted dejectedly. "There is a strong fighting spirit among us but if it means making a battleground of a peaceful country now almost defenseless, is it worthwhile?

"The British and French talk about 'aid' and 'our Allies, the Norwegians.' They talk but what have they done?"

This source emphasized that he was speaking privately and that "the Norwegian government still is intact and capable of making its own decisions."

German planes tried for three hours tonight to penetrate England's southeast coast defenses, returning repeatedly to the coastal region as they were driven off by heavy antiaircraft fire and searchlights.

British defenders theorized it was possible that the planes came singly in relays.

Norwegians Sue for Peace, Blame Allies

Retreat Cut Off When British Left, Commander Says

slaughts, the dispatch stated.—Editor's note.]

[Another United Press dispatch, from Stockholm, said Narvik was being shelled in a terrific bombardment from sea and land, according to neutral quarters.]

Getz, at the reported instigation of a majority of his officers, decided to ask the armistice for the whole Trondheim area after the Allies left. He did not, however, speak for the Norwegian government, which alone has power to sue for peace for the country as a whole, and so far has made no such move.

The Swedish News Agency correspondent at Grong sent a dramatic account of a hastily called council of war at which a majority of the Norwegians decided that further resistance was futile and directed Col. Getz to sue for peace.

Think Fighting Is Useless

"From his headquarters at Grong the Norwegian commander ordered all available officers to appear before him to confer on what best to do," the correspondent related.

"Surrender was decided upon by a majority of the officers who expressed the belief that further fighting was useless.

"The commander thereupon advised all troops stationed in this sector to cease firing immediately and to capitulate.

"Meanwhile, the Norwegian commander established contact with the German commanders. The Norwegian troops set up a camp until they could be interned.

"The German forces are advancing on Namsos from the south and according to latest advices which I have received already have reached Grong with the vanguard of their motorized units."

Other advices reaching Stockholm said that a number of Norwegian troops, commanded by a Lieut. Dahl, "a fanatical patriot but nevertheless a good soldier," decided against capitulation and fled to the mountains.

"We'll fight on and we'll make a determined stand, despite the severe thinning of our ranks," they said.

The Allies' general withdrawal from all the center of the country left them with a grip upon Norway only in the far northern sector above Narvik, the German-held iron ore port.

Whether some of the troops withdrawn from central Norway would go there was in doubt—(one British officer said they were going "to England")—but in any event, the war in central Norway was finished.

The British and their French "Blue Devil" supporters pulled out of the Steinkjer-Namsos front, 60 to 100 miles north of Trondheim, leaving entrenchments, supplies and ill-equipped, hopelessly outflanked Norwegians. Then they sailed away in their ships.

If Col. Getz can be believed, they did this without even telling the Norwegians and hence ruining his line of retreat northward along the railway and motor road to Mosjoen, some 80 miles away.

At Narvik, the Arctic port which the Allies have ringed—some 300 miles north of Namsos—the British and French apparently expect reinforcements, preliminary to starting a push from three directions on the town. German forces still are holding out at Narvik, and, even there, are reported in some advices to be showing signs of offensive action in an effort to break the siege.

German bombers also have penetrated now to the Narvik area, and are described as active.

News of the Allied departure from Steinkjer and Namsos came suddenly and stunningly on the twenty-fourth day of Norway's invasion.

The world already knew of the withdrawal of the British Expeditionary Force, in the face of German air superiority, from their Andalsnes foothold, 100 miles southwest of Trondheim.

Before then, even, the Germans, holding all of Southern Norway, had hammered a line of communication from Oslo all the way to Trondheim, where a Nazi landing force took possession at the start of the campaign.

But it had been presumed that the British troops from Andalsnes would go to Namsos and that the British and the French Alpine Chasseurs who were with them there would try to form a line across the country above Trondheim, from the coast to the Swedish border.

Troops Fill Streets

Instead, it became known today that the French began moving out of Namsos Wednesday night and the British under heavy German plane attack—Thursday night.

The bomb-pocked streets of Namsis were filled all Thursday with troops marching to the docks, said correspondents who got their stories across the border only today.

They were taken out to six troopships, guarded by destroyers, which lay at anchor in the fjord.

"A German bomb dropped near one destroyer, killing 30 and wounding 60," said one Swedish correspondent.

On the Steinkjer front, the Germans were expected at any time.

The British had suffered heavily there—a whole battalion was cut up by a Nazi company ten days ago. The main factor in stemming the German advance, since then, has been the valiant defense by Norwegian troops.

But now the Norwegians' fight seems hopeless.

Although the British left trucks, army cars and a wealth of other supplies behind, and these supplies now are being speedily distributed to the remaining Norwegian troops on the Steinkjer front, it is not enough.

The Norwegians themselves, with scarcely enough ammunition for ten minutes of heavy firing, are being encircled.

Ore Docks Blown Up

In any event, advices coming across the border tonight indicated Narvik now is the chief area of combat, and there was speculation that the Namsos Allies may be headed there.

The Allies at Narvik now include both British and French Blue Devils.

Within the port, the Germans have blown up the ore docks while German air bombs drum steadily on the Allied siege lines.

The Allies are awaiting supplies, as well as more men.

Destruction of the ore docks will keep the British from using them for shipments for Narvik, even though they take the town. Morever, the Germans still are masters of the iron ore line to the Swedish mines, and could destroy the line and tunnels, if need be.

Besides the British and French troops at Narvik, there may be some British patrols at Tromso, 125 miles farther north.

However, the situation in the north is greatly confused.

Here, British, Swedish and Norwegian quarters agreed that unless the Allies hit quickly and sharply with an offensive from the Arctic, Germany is assured of an easy territorial victory, and, together with Russia, of economic domination in all Scandinavia.

As for King Haakon and the Norwegian government, their whereabouts remained obscure tonight.

The King, after watching his country yield to modern warfare from some secret mountain fastness, was reported, without confirmation, to have embarked from some western port.

occupation of Albania last year.

The fortifications were built under the direction of Premier Jan Metaxas, Greece's "strong man."

But even if Greece can rely on her "Metaxas Line" to the north there is no such line of defense between her and the Dodecanese Islands.

Northwest of Alexandria

Italian owned since Italy took them from the Ottoman Empire in the Balkan war of 1912, they lie along the Turkish side of the Aegean Sea, 400 miles air line northwest of Alexandria.

Key point in the new Italian military and naval concentrations is said to be the Island of Rhodes, largest of the group, and only 375 miles from Alexandria. Here, according to the reports reaching diplomatic circles in Athens, Italy has stationed 15 submarines.

The reports also said that the normal Italian garrisons in the islands have been reinforced by 50,000 to 55,000 fresh troops, and that fighting planes are based on the Island of Leors, only 46 minutes from Athens as the bomber flies.

From its Dodecanese stronghold, rated one of the most formidable in the eastern Mediterranean, Italy can strike effectively in several directions.

Threat to Dardanelles

She is in position to make a strong bid for control of the entrance to the Aegean, through which ships must pass to reach the Dardanelles. Her planes, submarines and surface craft also would be a pronounced threat to Turkey, guardian of the Dardanelles and nonbelligerent ally of Britain and France, and to sea communications between Turkey and the Allies in case of war.

On the Turkish side, officials long have been outspoken in asserting they would like to see Italy out of the Dodecanese, where they regard her military establishment and her naval and air bases as a pistol.

Rhodes is less than 30 miles from the Turkish mainland, and some of the other islands are nearer.

British Evolve Plan to Repel 'Chute Invasion

Precautions Taken As Military Men Fear 'Lightning Swoop'

By Wallace Carroll,
United Press Staff Writer

London, May 3.—Authorities today redoubled precautions against any Nazi attempt to land parachute troops in the British Isles and seize a key airdrome in what Prime Minister Chamberlain has warned might be a "lightning swoop" by the Germans.

Military quarters feared that, with the Allied withdrawals from central and southern Norway, the Germans might attempt an "immediate "invasion" of the British Isles from their new Norwegian air bases.

(Uncensored information reaching the United Press from London said that the British general staff has a fully developed "E Plan" for coping with any such parachute "invasion" and that large numbers of troops have been stationed along the eastern Scottish coast for such an eventuality. These troops, as well as large numbers of defense planes, are heavily concentrated in the vicinity of Invergordon, British naval and air base).

Meanwhile, British bombing planes continued to bombard Germany's air bases in Denmark and Norway in an attempt to prevent them from being used for any attack against the British Isles or for transporting more Nazi troops to Norway.

The British planes were said to have "smoked out a new nest of German air transports" in a wave of bombing attacks extending throughout last night against Ry, in the North Jutland area of Denmark.

Other British planes bombed the airport at Stavanger, Norway, and Fornebu Airdrome at Oslo.

In connection with British fears of a parachute invasion of the British Isles, it is recalled that during the World War the general staff kept strong forces along the east coast to repel a possible German attack.

Last winter neutral military attaches quoted certain Nazi leaders in Berlin as boasting of a plan to use German air power to land a strong force in the British Isles.

Charges of Antidemocracy In Schools Found True in Part

Twenty-third annual meeting of the American Council of Education opened yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel. ### Educators Tell Council Meeting Here Administrators Are Taking Steps; Class Films Held Revolutionary Instrument

The charge that America's public school system is democratic more in theory than in fact was examined last night by a Yale University educator and found to be true, at least in part.

Mark A. May, director of the Institute of Human Relations at Yale, told the American Council on Education that the most hopeful sign is that school teachers and administrators are not taking this situation lying down. Rather, he said, they realize, "Democracy is essentially a trial and error process, which contains in itself its own correctives."

May and Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, shared the speakers' platform at the council's banquet meeting at the Hotel Mayflower last night.

The only possibility of a "rational" peace agreement after the close of the present war lies in an Allied victory, Dr. Bowman said.

"If Germany wins," the educator said, "this will be a wholly irrational world. . . . Then no constructive peace program will come. However if the Allies win only after a long war don't imagine a wholly rational peace can be arrived at."

He discussed the "trimming" of Germany by the fear-dominated meeting in Paris which drafted the Versailles Treaty. Dr. Bowman was a chief territorial expert at that conference.

Britain and France after a long struggle will make doubly sure of an enduring victory and will "apply force" to insure it, he explained.

Earlier, at the opening of the educational group's twenty-third annual meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel, the more than 300 delegates discussed a variety of subjects, ranging from youth unemployment to the classroom function of motion pictures.

So long as wealthy communities enjoy better schools than poor communities and pupils are autocratically regimented, the charges of anti-democracy will not be without foundation, May declared.

"The education of a democrat," he said, "is largely a matter of emancipation. It is a process of setting youth free from dependence on parents, relatives, government or the privileged classes. It is accomplished mainly by the development of creative talents and the release from inhibition of latent resources."

The American Youth Commission, organized in 1935 to meet conditions growing out of the depression, has received a one-year reprieve, its director, Floyd W. Reeves, reported to the American Council of Education.

Scheduled to expire this year, the commission will continue to function until June 1, 1941, because of the seriousness of the youth unemployment problem.

Highlight of the annual report by Dr. George F. Zook, council president, was his statement that 2½ years' experimentation with classroom movies has shown that the educational film "is the most revolutionary instrument introduced in education in our day and generation."

Speakers at the closing sessions today at the Wardman Park Hotel will include the Rev. Robert I. Gannon, S. J., president of Fordham University, and Miss Constance Warren, president of Sarah Lawrence College.

New York, May 3 (AP).—The custody of 6-year-old James Elias Lewisohn was awarded today to Ludwig Lewisohn, the father, while the mother Thelma Bowman Spear, kissed the middle-aged author tearfully and cried out:

The decision—by State Supreme Court Justice Aaron Levy—ended a bitter suit in which Lewisohn and Miss Spear had made public many of the tempestuous scenes of their 16-year-long liaison.

The boy was with Justice Levy in private conversations, however, for about an hour before the final award was made.

Lewisohn was accompanied by his wife, Edna Manley Lewisohn, whom he married recently.

Paper Is Reported Backing Both Sides In Same Issue

By a Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, May 3.—A charge that a publication sold its "impartiality" to both sides in the Senatorial primary fight tonight precipitated heated accusations of fraud and an appeal for a Senate Committee investigation of campaign irregularities.

The charges were made by Richard C. O'Connell, president of the Baltimore City Council. He said his complaints had brought a promise from the chairman of the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, to send investigators here tomorrow.

O'Connell is a member of the Democratic faction supporting Senator Radcliffe in his battle for renomination against National Committeeman Howard Bruce.

Only a few hours earlier the Gillette committee made known that it contemplated no preliminary public report to the Senate before Monday's balloting. Observers here accepted this as meaning that no illegal activities had been unearthed up to that time.

Investigators entered the State April 23 to sift rumors and charges of excessive spending and coercion of public employes. Committee practice has been to present a preliminary report only when there is evidence which it believes indicates illegal campaigning.

O'Connell showed reporters two copies of the paper, both dated Friday, May 3. He said that the Radcliffe camp had paid $50 to the paper's editor for a three-column advertisement and a "news" story about Radcliffe.

One copy of the paper bore the advertisement on page 2 and an accompanying article, which stated: "There is no good reason why Senator George L. Radcliffe should not be renominated by the Democrats of Maryland." The article boosted the incumbent, terming him an "able champion" of organized labor, agriculture, and "legitimate" business, as well as a "firm advocate of peace" and military preparedness.

In the other copy of the paper neither the advertisement nor the accompanying article appeared. Instead, the front and last pages both were completely devoted to forwarding the Bruce candidacy.

It was learned today that the Senate committee investigators in their 10-day inquiry had scrutinized the Republican Presidential primary and Congressional contests in both parties as well as the Democratic primary for the United States Senate.

They searched, apparently without result, for verification of reports that large sums of money had been sent into the State to elect an uninstructed delegation to the Republican National Convention and defeat the uncontested candidacy of Thomas E. Dewey for Maryland's convention votes.

Both Republican candidates for the Senatorial nomination, former Gov. Harry W. Nice and former Mayor William F. Broening, have indorsed Dewey's candidacy. Nice's indorsement came less than three weeks ago, after repeated reports that he would oppose the New Yorker.

Political Paradox

If you have nothing better to do between now and Monday you might try to determine the issues in this Democratic senatorial primary campaign in Maryland. It might be a wholesome substitute for the brain-taxing pastime of attempting to figure out the strategic theories of the British Imperial Defense Council, or the criteria applied by Messrs. Griffith and Cambria in the selection of pitching talent.

In Maryland, as you know, Senator George L. Radcliffe is seeking renomination. In sharp contradistinction to his senior colleague, Senator Tydings, Mr. Radcliffe is a New Dealer, though not, to be sure, a 100 proof New Dealer, either by volume or by specific gravity. Nevertheless, with some notable exceptions, such as the Supreme Court reorganization bill, he has supported the principal Administration measures, thus voting on the opposite side to Mr. Tydings.

In consequence Mr. Radcliffe's primary opponent, Mr. Howard Bruce, has been arguing that, with one Maryland Senator canceling out another like an equation in algebra, it has amounted to the same thing as having no Senators from Maryland at all. Mr. Bruce has cited a number of important bills since 1933 on which he would have voted precisely as Mr. Tydings voted—that is to say against the New Deal.

Thus, by the usual processes of logic, one might expect to find Mr. Roosevelt, who two years ago so eagerly desired the "purge" of Mr. Tydings, to be as warmly urging the renomination of Mr. Radcliffe, on the theory that Tydings-minus-Radcliffe is preferable to Tydings-plus-Bruce. But Mr. Roosevelt is doing nothing of the sort. He is remaining blandly aloof from the whole business.

One might also expect to find Mr. Tydings plumping it up for his newly discovered alter ego, Mr. Bruce. Instead, we find that Mr. Tydings has been earnestly urging the renomination of his minus quantity, Mr. Radcliffe.

All we can make of it is that this is probably just another illustration of the famous Freudian pleasure-pain principle.

What Business Thinks

The resolutions adopted by the United States Chamber of Commerce this week are of special interest because they indicate what large numbers of representative businessmen are thinking about in an election year. While the chamber has expressed the views of its members on a wide variety of national issues, it is easy to see that the major emphasis has been placed upon problems of national finance, especially public expenditures and taxation.

If anyone were asked to guess the chief concern of business, judging from an analysis of the current resolutions, he would almost certainly answer: The mounting cost of government. Anxiety about the financial outlook is given more frequent and forceful expression than any positive grievances or criticisms of specific Government policies. Indeed, such vital issues as national defense and relief activities are viewed primarily in relation to the financial problems growing out of the cost of relief and defense programs.

After commending the steps taken to strengthen the Army, Navy and air forces, for instance, the chamber adds that "unbalanced budgets and further increases in the national debt cannot continue if we are to retain the financial strength necessary for any prolonged defense."

In urging administration of relief activities by State and local governments, with Federal aid only supplementary, a warning against excessive outlays is again voiced. And recognizing that businessmen, like all other sections of the community, are tempted to raid the public treasury, the chamber asks that business organizations use their influence to dissuade State and local authorities from asking or accepting Federal funds.

The chamber has shown good judgment in thus stressing the necessity of reducing expenditures. Given the spending proclivities both of the executive and the legislative branches of Government, these suggestions for improving executive control over expenditures may reflect undue optimism. But restoration of sound fiscal conditions would be much easier if the public were fully aware of the threat to economic and social stability resulting from lavish spending.

In stressing the responsibility of its members for active support of economy programs, instead of mere lip service to demands for retrenchment, the United States Chamber of Commerce is setting a worthy example for other organized groups to follow.

Try It On Your Map

The obvious advantage possessed by Germany over the Allies at the present juncture in Europe can be measured in precise geometrical terms. It is the advantage which the diameter of a semicircle possesses over the arc.

The demonstration does not require the services of a military expert. It needs merely a map of Europe, a pencil and a pair of compasses. Place the point of the latter on Berlin and describe an arc starting from the city of Bergen, the occupied port of Norway nearest to Britain's coast. This arc will strike Great Britain at Newcastle, pass through the industrial Midlands, reach the Channel close to the great naval base of Portsmouth and enter France at Le Havre.

Thence the curve will almost bisect France, then cut across a corner of Italy, passing through the Gulf of Genoa, across Italy from Leghorn to Ancona, and into Jugoslavia just north of Spalato. The semicircle—180 degrees from Bergen—is complete at a point in central Jugoslavia a little west of Belgrade.

The diameter connecting the two ends of this semicircle is, except for the last hundred miles, entirely within territory controlled or dominated by Germany. This line runs southeast from Bergen across the southern tip of Norway, crosses the Skagerrak near its mouth, cuts through the middle of Denmark, and of course passes through Berlin, the center by hypothesis. Thence it crosses Bohemia, cuts a corner of Austria just east of Vienna, traverses western Hungary and ends 100 miles deep in Jugoslavia, at the point mentioned.

The interest in this geometrical exercise lies in the fact that the arc of the semicircle represents approximately the path that British and French troops and supplies must follow in moving from the recent northern front in Scandinavia to the potential southern front in the Balkans. The described diameter, on the other hand, is roughly the line which German transport would follow in moving from a victorious battlefield in Norway to a new test of strength in southeastern Europe.

The distance along the arc of any semicircle is always a trifle more than half as much again as the distance along the diameter joining the two ends of the semicircle. The ratio, in other words, is as 3 to 2. And those figures, from the viewpoint of communications alone, would therefore be approximately the odds in Germany's favor if the war should have simultaneously developed both a Scandinavian and a Mediterranean front.

The calculation, of course, assumes the continued neutrality of the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland. It leaves wholly out of account the military, financial, economic and social strength of the belligerent nations. It ignores many vital factors. But it is nonetheless suggestive in emphasizing the very considerable advantage enjoyed by Germany merely because of her central position in Europe. And this factor has not been given the attention which is very much in order.

From the Arctic to the Mediterranean, it is the Berlin-Rome axis which has the inner track. At any given point, from Norway to Jugoslavia, German strength can be much more quickly and easily concentrated than can that of Great Britain and France. It is a simple geographical truth with far-reaching implications. It will help to explain, for instance, the coincidence between the ominous increase in Italy's war preparation and the British decision to yield virtually all of Norway to its German conquerors.

Patented Ideas

In the welter of our domestic and foreign problems, a bill introduced in the House of Representatives this year designed to solve all our problems by "streamlining democracy" has been overlooked. Sponsored by Representative Fadjo Cravens, of Arkansas, the bill would patent "social inventions."

A statement to the press, presumably by Mr. Cravens, explains that previous social inventions have included such things as the Red Cross, the income tax, the Constitution and even all the recent alphabetical agencies. By patenting these, after the fashion of mechanical inventions, Congressman Cravens hopes to promote interest in this field of ideas and thereby encourage more and better social inventions. He would, however, discourage "alien" ideas by making patentable only those which fit within the framework of the Constitution.

The statement ends on an earnest note: "It seems that it is one proposal that we cannot well afford to reject, costing nothing," it reads, "and it might bring in just the one idea that would bring prosperity and happiness to all the people."

The idea that more social inventions, especially if they resemble the alphabetical agencies, will cost us nothing, is certainly a quaint one. Moreover, most of the ideas on which we are operating originated several centuries before we adopted them. Many were given a trial by ancient civilizations.

All things considered, we are forced to disagree with Mr. Cravens. His is one idea we can afford to reject without even a patentable second thought.

Craven Procedure

The unprecedented action of the House Judiciary Committee in voting by secret ballot to table the Hatch bill was more than a craven procedure. It was also tantamount to admitting that there is overwhelming public support for that measure throughout the country.

In contests for election to public office the secrecy of the ballot is essential to protect voters from coercion and thus assure a truly representative form of government. But if elected representatives in their turn resort to secret ballots to cover actions of which they are ashamed, voters have no way of holding Congress to accountability. Hence the preservation of representative government calls for open decisions on legislative issues, quite as imperatively as for secrecy of the ballot in elections.

The Judiciary Committee should be roundly condemned, therefore, for the underhanded and essentially undemocratic tactics employed to kill a bill which many members dare not openly oppose. To make matters worse, somebody has seemingly resorted to outright prevarication to escape the consequences of the attempted sabotage. The motion to table was reported as carried by a vote of 14 to 10, while 13 committee members afterwards stated that they had opposed the tabling resolution.

The House cannot acquiesce in the committee's decision not to report the Hatch bill. To do so would be equivalent to a tacit indorsement of the shabby tactics employed to prevent a showdown on a legislative proposal of vital public concern. The bill can still be brought before the House by petition as soon as the requisite number of signatures is obtained.

If that move fails, the public will be forced to conclude that a majority of the House membership secretly approves the action of its Judiciary Committee and hopes that Federal funds will continue to be available in this election year to finance State political machines.

Apron Strings

The New York designer responsible for Lynn Fontanne's costumes in the new Sherwood play, "There Shall Be No Night," has very likely started a new spring vogue in women's apparel. For Miss Fontanne, who plays the part of the wife of a Finnish scientist when confronted by the Russian invasion resorts to dusting the furniture vigorously. For this worthy purpose Mme. Valentina has covered each stylish dress with an equally smart apron.

Already fashion magazines and advertisements are showing the effects. Plain dresses are being livened with gay aprons and colorful prints are offset by somber ones. Single costumes may be readily given many and varied aspects merely by changing the aprons over the basic frock. Both Mrs. and Miss America are donning this demure guise for morning, afternoon and even evening affairs.

It may be going too far to read significance into the folds of an apron. But on the other hand it is possible that the women of this country, like the scientist's wife in the Sherwood play, have looked at the scenes about them and, figuratively speaking, are taking to dusting furniture.

Seeking Easy Knowledge

From the Buffalo Evening News.

It is a little amusing to note that President Stringfellow Barr of St. John's College, Annapolis, is perturbed by the attention showered on the educational experiment he is conducting at the institution in the study of the history of ideas. A subject of articles in popular periodicals, it has attracted attention far beyond scholastic circles. Visitors in various walks of life have been coming in hordes to the college and President Barr's mail includes letters not only asking for information but frequently ascribing to him ideals and aims that are quite different from those he holds. Many of the visitors indicate that they have little understanding of the real purposes of the St. John's plan.

This sudden interest in what may be called for want of a better term "culture" is also reflected in the record of Mortimer J. Adler's recently published "How to Read a Book." It has been on the "best seller" lists in several cities. Among other things it discusses the long line of classics from ancient Greece to modern times that are texts at St. John's.

These developments suggest that the American public is conducting one of its periodical searches for an easy road to learning. It has happened before, especially at the time when the Harvard Classics were issued. It is a wistful habit of the public that frequently is abandoned after the first tentative effort. But some may actually gain in knowledge from it. Meanwhile, the hard, serious, disciplined educational effort at St. John's will continue. It will be years before its effects on the educational system of the country will be definitely determined.

Union Organization

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A potential beneficiary of the repercussion set in motion by columnist Westbrook Pegler's sustained expose of accelerating, antisocial trends in some big union labor circles is the organized labor movement itself. In prosecution of his thus self-assigned task, in the major public interest, Mr. Pegler is doing the union cause no disservice whatever. His column in The Post of April 26 included a sentence which is due that emphasis possible only by continual repetition. It is: "Comparatively few Americans really know anything about union organization and conduct."

That is correct. And among those Americans who don't know are a large enough number of union men and too large a number of these latter-day labor leaders and union organizers. Today's newspapers print news of a labor leader's desertion of the union field for business pursuits. Not so long since he was a preacher, and in the course of his short but turbulent labor chieftain's career he headed the same union, first in the A. F. of L., then in the C. I. O. and, again, in the A. F. of L. A potential labor leader would never confuse opportunity with opportunism. Only lack of even a rudimentary knowledge of union organization and conduct could constrain one to the paths of opportunism. Presently, the type fills the woods, tramples the weeds.

A short while back this writer was denounced to be "a passe reactionary" by an A. F. of L. leader assigned to organizing Government workers here and hereabouts, because of my temerity in reminding him of the fact that the railroad brotherhoods are in no wise affiliated to the A. F. of L.—nor one to the other, and there are five of these independent railroad unions, greatest yet of all American unions (when at their peak about 1925). My denunciator, however, yet inclines to challenge that truth; and, presently, is anti-A. F. of L., a C. I. O. organizer; no less blatant in this than in the other instance.

Last November one of the big A. F. of L. international unions unloaded an obstreperous administrative official on demand of President William Green, it was reported. To be rid of him specifically, the international's general president suspended the set-up of which he was secretary-treasurer bodily.

"What's eatin' the unions" is the delusion of union leaders that labor is paramount in the American economy when, in truth, its place is functional, which is true of each and every element of the thing. Labor is due to find itself, or else suffer severely from readjustments by and in the paramount public interest. More Americans will have no alternative to really learning about union organization and conduct.

RIENZI B. LEMUS.
Washington, April 30.

From A "Mother Of Sons"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Father of Sons," being a realist, will not be crushed by the blast of opposition he will be sure to receive, but may enjoy even two cents' worth of support.

His invitation to discussion did not include mothers of sons, nevertheless there are some of us left who are unable to fool ourselves into believing that reiteration of slogans is more than a state of hypnosis.

For many years, in spite of all the writing on the wall, too many of us have refused to give up belief in fairy tales, and the democracies are now to suffer frightfully for their weaknesses. Twenty years of flabby peace and comfort talk has been poor preparation to face the realities of armies and countries under dictators whose tremendous efforts and sacrifices of their people have all been aimed at the single objective of conquest of the weak.

The people of the democracies will continue to resort to calling their government officials names in order to have scapegoats when life doesn't go to suit them, but such governments reflect the will of their people.

It is true we are too often uninformed of the seriousness of the issues, and judgment is reached on too little knowledge. Nevertheless it is our responsibility to inform ourselves, and how we can accept all the developments of the last several years and remain smugly unaware is more than I can take in.

Even now there will be millions who will not see that Stowe's account of the German punishment of the two battalions of British territorials shows what slaughter can be dealt out to troops inadequately trained and organizationally unprepared.

The loss of life will again be the frightful sacrifice exacted from peoples trained on peace talk.

And it is still "not our concern"!

We may have to learn "the hard way" and live in our smug, smug isolation surrounded by the power of Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan in their ascendancy.

This talk of our protecting the entire Western Hemisphere from future depredations, with the power of the British fleet gone, etc., amazes me. How can we go on believing that it is not to our own self-interest to swing all the weight possible to the Allies? And why not face it and throw it now instead of being persuaded piecemeal in far less efficient helpfulness, being fooled up to the last minute and then feeling tricked?

It is election year and truth seems to be on a holiday. Would credit to the Allies, even if it were never paid up, cost us more than the alternatives of tremendous navy and army forces that would take many years to become effective?

They (the Allies) may never need our men to fight alongside, and we do have the Pacific situation to remember when it comes to naval operations, but I agree with "Father of Sons", that it would change the color of the present holocaust if the United States would openly and fully support the Allies. And I'm feeling more hopeful that realism is going to be faced, as I see more mention of the Johnson Act coming up for discussion. Alsop and Kinter's "White Paper", "Neutrality's" foolish face unmasked, and our own military forces given even too late a training.

My sons and my daughters' husbands are no less precious to me than those of the shortsighted parents who sentimentalize in blind ignorance that greater costs are paid by those peoples who can't face facts. Would we be in such a state of chaos today if the powerful democracies had not relaxed their vigilance and strength? There seems to me to be nothing "monstrous" about the feeling of "Father of Sons," but I bet his ears will be batted down with gusto! After which the batter-downers will gulp a hasty dinner and "escape" with Shirley Temple or Dorothy Lamour or Clark Gable into the never never land of sweetness and light and romance.

We are due for a sad bout with reality, and we shall get it, one way or another. MOTHER OF SONS.
Washington, April 26.

Old Cockatoo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in a little article, about the old cockatoo at the Zoo, which appeared in The Post of April 20.

It was hatched—and his companion—in the wilds of Australia and was presented to my uncle, Col. James Morris Morgan, the then Consul General to Melbourne from the United States, just prior to his return to this country.

Other gifts were a wire-haired terrier of good pedigree and two other terriers. My uncle and his wife returned, of course, by steamer bringing only my aunt's own pet terrier with them. Their boxes and the afore-mentioned birds and animals came on a sailing vessel around the Horn, the trip lasting six months. Landing in New York in the late spring of 1887, they were taken at once to my father's place, Langdrum, near the town of Bethesda, Md.

The birds spent the first summer under a great linden tree, and were there called Darby and Joan as it was not known they were both males. The wire-haired terrier was given to me. The two straight-haired terriers remained with Col. Morgan.

In 1890 the birds had become such a trouble in the house that my mother, Mrs. Lavinia Morgan Drum, after speaking to the head of the Smithsonian Institution about them, took them to town with her and my two sons, Richard Coulter Drum Hunt and Henry Jackson Hunt 3d, where they presented the cockatoos to that institution which later on gave them to the Zoological Park authorities.

Before leaving Australia the birds spoke a little, but after landing in this country they never spoke but only gave shrill, harsh cries. As near as I can make out, "Old Tom," as he seems now to be called, must be nearly 60 years old. I know him to be over 55.

BLOSSOM DRUM HUNT OLIPHANT.
Washington, April 20.

Art Of Mispronunciation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have lately noted the following errors of pronunciation by radio announcers and news commentators, who, like Jove, sometimes nod. Accented on the first syllable instead of the second: 1, the nouns address, adult, aspirant, grimace, and inquiry; 2, the verbs export, import, and increase; and 3, the adjective expert which is generally mispronounced. Accented on the second syllable instead of the first were cerebral, Chilean, colleague, decade, exigency, formidable, harass (of course), hospitable, integral, premier, respite, and suspect (noun). Premier is often turned into the French feminine premiere, something quite different.

The accented vowels were mispronounced in biography (bee), flagrant, holocaust, novice, quintuplets, siren, suburb and supremacy. In aerial, a word of four syllables, the accented "e" is almost never heard. Arctic often becomes "artic." In "shortlived" the i was pronounced as in "hit." In "repercussion" and reconstruction," the e of the first syllable was pronounced as in "wreck."

I believe there is respectable authority for making bureaucracy rhyme with autocracy, aristocracy, plutocracy, democracy, etc., but that seems to be the result of careless and false assimilation to those words derived wholly from the Greek, in each of which the o is part of the r-ime root, not of the common suffix. So far as I can recall, the trigraph eau never has the sound given to the o in these words.

Proper names fare pretty well in general, but Moscow is usually given a bovine sound; also one hears Myussolini and, occasionally Noo York. READER.

Blood Bank

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Board of Lady Visitors has asked me to tell you how greatly they appreciate your sponsoring of the very successful St. Valentine's Day bridge parties. The great publicity given the parties was largely responsible for their success.

The hospital and many of its patients will be much benefited by the work accomplished through the funds raised for the blood and serum bank.

The Post Impressionist

Take A Bow

Before a gala audience packing the hall for his appearance, Toscanini has just led his men through the sparkling gayety of Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony." His baton has conjured up the sweetness of summer, the magnificence of a sudden thunderstorm, the boisterous fun of that picnic featuring a German band, oom-pah and all. This is happy stuff, even rowdy in spots. But when the maestro turns to take his bow, his face is filled with deepest gloom. Every line proclaims, "Oh, the pain of it all!" Whatever he conducts, he greets applause sorrowfully.

Kirsten Flagstad has taken the roof off Constitution Hall with Brunhilde's war cry. Her "Yo-To-Ho-To-Ho!" sent winged riders soaring across space. The heroic soprano quite magically is Brunhilde, and the eyes of the mind put a shield in her hand and a bodice of chain mail over that dress she is wearing—until, in response to deafening applause, she curtseys. The quaint bow transforms her instantly from a creature of legend to a simple Norwegian girl, young for her years. It is somehow touching. It is undeniably modest. It will do for Grieg—but not for Wagner.

These are but two aspects to a problem that has worried me for years. Actors work out their curtain calls as carefully as any bit of business in a play. Ballet dancers have the choreography for that gratifying part of the dance well practiced. Ice skaters, prize fighters, race horses have a suitable routine for acknowledging the enthusiasm of their fans. But most musicians don't know how to take a bow. Appearances before crowned heads haven't helped. Albert Spalding, with his easy poise, Marian Anderson, with her natural dignity, are exceptions.

So I fret when Barbirolli, who conducts with little waste motion, makes a bow that dusts off the podium. When my favorite pianist, masterful at the keyboard, jerks like a puppet on strings away from it, I am sorrowful as Toscanini. Another piano virtuoso who bends his head mechanically while a fishy eye calculates the size of the audience—and the box office take—drives me almost to hisses.

What is there about music that produces such a collection of bobs, dips and ducks? The diminutive soprano in a picture gown inevitably does a court bow—and the result is cute, not courtly. The conductor with a profile carefully bows way over to the right-hand boxes and balcony, way over to the left-hand ditto, but never by any chance straight toward the main body of the audience. The performer with a mane tosses it dramatically between swoops. He would be lost with a crew haircut.

There are the hand-holders, two classes. A woman soloist coming out in response to her third call will appear hand in hand with the conductor. You can bet on that one. It's a sure thing, too, that he will display a becoming reluctance. She may even have to tug, he hangs back so shyly. Together these two children of the muse will bend in pleasing amity, a unity their tempo didn't show in that concerto!

The male of the species doesn't cling to one support. He pumps the hand not only of the conductor, but also of the concertmaster, the first cellist and, every other first-desk man, within reach. Stokowski's stunt of reversing the seating of his orchestra—brasses up front, strings in the rear—will introduce a number of new faces to these hands-around boys. They'll be shaking paws they never shook before, and that at least will be a change.

The handkerchiefs wielded would, if laid end to end, reach all the way back to Bach. I don't think a violinist works any harder than a dancer. Picture Massine mopping his brow on completing an assortment of entre chats, Shan-Kar signaling for a towel after one of his very muscular performances. But I have seen a great fiddler systematically wipe his neck, cheek, forehead, and the palms of both hands while he absent-mindedly acknowledged the tumult of the audience. His fiddle, too, got a dust-off.

The women soloists, contrarily, never indicate the slightest strain. Handkerchiefs are only ornaments to them, gauzy things to flirt coquettishly when they aren't flirting with the conductor. That last is supposed to bring oomph to the concert hall. The men achieve that end by directing a special bow to the mystery woman in a box up front. That brings a craning of necks, a rustle of whispered who-is-she's. She may be his brother-in-law's aunt here to see the cherry blossoms, but it's still good.

My reaction to all this has made me favor the Heifetz-Horowitz poker face school of bowers. Neither man is coy, and neither is cute. What they think of the clamor no one knows. They don't bounce out to demonstrate vitality; or swivel out to show suavity; or stride out to display strength. Their bows aren't impressive, but they have the merit of not distracting the listener from his recollection of the music just played.

My hope that this school will grow is all that keeps me from advocating the adoption of a robot to take all bows. He would be equipped with a device to register the number of calls answered, of course. But this contrivance would do more. It would measure the volume of the applause, and when the clapping didn't justify it, the robot would not appear—for just another bow.

For Keynoters And Party Managers

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that the politicians who are now in control of the Republican Party intend to offer the voters a guaranty, as definite as words can make it, that they will keep the country out of war. It is assumed that the Democrats will follow suit, and that then the Republican campaigners will insist that while their guaranty can be relied upon, the Democratic guaranty cannot be. This, at least, is what the politicians now think they will be thinking between June 15 and July 15.

Their present plan of campaign rests on the assumption that the war will be essentially the same war throughout the summer and until election; that is to say, that the war will continue to be bottled up in the North Sea, on the Western Front, and perhaps in the Mediterranean. In such a war the Allies may lose a position here and there; the Nazis and perhaps the Italians may overrun small countries here and there. But the war will remain a localized European war from which the United States can easily keep aloof by calling home its merchant ships and its citizens.

If this estimate of the situation is correct, it is indeed true that the guaranties will be valid: as long as the war is bottled up in Europe, no occasion is likely to present itself in which the United States would have to face the awful choice between war and peace.

WHETHER THE WAR will remain bottled up in Europe depends, however, not upon these party platforms but upon whether the Allies can resist and repel any great attack upon their naval supremacy. Thus far they have bottled up the war in Europe. Their navies hold a great semicircle from Narvik in northern Norway to Gibraltar, the Dardanelles and Suez. Within that circle their armies have thus far held the positions on land from which serious blows might be struck by land and air against the ports and shipyards and supply stations and the munitions industries which support their naval power.

However, in Denmark and in central and southern Norway they may now be losing one of the key positions from which a critical attack can be made on their sea power. There may be other losses to follow—no one can say where—perhaps in Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg, perhaps in the Balkans and in Greece, perhaps in Spain and Northern Africa. The crucial question is whether the loss of key positions makes the Allies so vulnerable that their sea power is decisively injured; if it is, the European aggressors can break through it and unbottle the bottled up war.

IF THIS should happen, the war will spread from Europe into the Atlantic and into Africa; and in the Far East the situation will become critical. We shall face the choice between holding the Japanese in check at the risk of war, or of yielding to them the whole Pacific west of Hawaii and thereby placing in their hands a virtual monopoly of the rubber and tin supplies of the world. If we surrender that, the Japanese will be able to discuss an embargo against the United States to insure our compliance with their demands.

In that event the pledges given by Gov. Stassen in his keynote speech will be worth much less than par. They will then have just as much value as a guaranty against American involvement in war as did similar pledges in 1916 when both parties swore to keep us out of war. In 1916, as in 1940, the pledges were good as long as the war was bottled up in Europe; the pledges were no good in 1917, and neither party felt it could carry them out, once the war exploded through the encircling naval power which localized it.

In 1917 the explosion struck our shipping to northern Europe; in 1940, if the explosion occurs again, it will strike interests that are even more vital to our security than was our merchant shipping in the North Atlantic. For it will strike at our security in the Pacific, at our economic independence with respect to Japan, and at the outposts in the Atlantic by means of which our meagerly defended Monroe Doctrine is upheld.

IF ALL THAT were involved in these declarations of the candidates, the keynoters, and the platform writers was the chance that they may prove to be delusive as they were in 1916, one might say that a certain propensity to bamboozle the people is to be expected in any election campaign. But more than that is now involved.

It is not only a question of the insincerity of making promises that no man can be sure of fulfilling. This would not be too important in itself; we have become so habituated to it in domestic politics that we amiably and indulgently forgive in a political candidate a calculated and planned insincerity which we should regard as immoral in a friend. We regard it as a legitimate part of the game of politics, more or less like a fake kick in football, when a candidate for the highest office in the land says one thing to the voters and another thing to his intimate supporters.

But in this particular instance the making of cast-iron pledges for a long and very uncertain future has a much graver disadvantage. For the two parties to give public pledges that they will never go to war is to make it much more probable that the United States will have to go to war. It worked that way in 1916, and there is every reason to think that it will work that way again. The cast-iron pledges will be heard not only in the United States but in Berlin, Rome, Moscow and Tokyo. They will provide the warmongers with exactly the argument that they most need to overcome the reluctance of the more moderate people.

If American politicians succeed in convincing the adventurers in those four capitals that, except in case of a direct military attack on the United States or in the Caribbean, the United States will under no circumstances ever go to war, they will have misled them into taking chances that otherwise they may hesitate to take. They will have invited Berlin, Rome, Moscow and Tokyo to make the European war a world war, and by that they will have made it infinitely more difficult for the United States to keep out of war.

GOVERNOR STASSEN'

I DO NOT suppose that considerations of this sort are likely to weigh with party strategists or with candidates when they are thoroughly intoxicated with the greatest ambition that an American citizen can possess. But there are men of experience and influence who have cool heads and have experience from the other war.

They will remember the campaign of 1916. They will remember, those of them who knew Woodrow Wilson, the awful anxiety which came to him in September before election, when he learned from Berlin that the rulers of Germany, convinced that the United States could not and would not intervene effectively, had taken the fateful decision to begin unrestricted submarine war. I myself remember well an afternoon on the veranda of President Wilson's summer home at Shadow Lawn shortly after he had heard the secret news from Berlin. I can remember his sadness at what he realized was the almost certain ruin of his hope that he could keep the country out of war, and how desperately he searched for expedients by which he could divert the rulers of Germany, or, failing that, persuade them how great was the risk they were taking.

HE FAILED—but not, as the slanders say, because he wanted to go to war; no man wanted less to go to war than did Woodrow Wilson and none went through such an agony of conscience as did he up to the very last moment in April, 1917. Wilson failed because the desperate rulers of Germany were convinced that America would almost certainly not intervene, that if America did intervene, it would take so long to decide that it would be too late, and that in any event America was not prepared to wage war. That same conviction exists in Berlin and Rome today, and every effort is now being made to establish it in Tokyo.

It would, therefore, be a tragic pity if, for an apparent partisan advantage immediately, the politicians took a position which no statesman in his senses has ever taken or will ever take. For they will be playing politics with the security of the American people.

Clean Reputation

FOR THE INFORMATION of the decent members of the American Federation of Labor data are here submitted bearing on the character and associations of George Scalise, late international president of the Building Service Employes' Union, whose petition for a Presidential pardon was indorsed a few months ago by William Green. In signing the appeal Mr. Green staked the good faith and good name of the great national Federation of Labor unions which has honored him with an office of trust and responsibility.

This material is cumulative in effect, and some repetition will be necessary to provide the core of the snowball.

Scalise, convicted in his youth of forcing a young girl into prostitution and elevated to the presidency of an international union, with no vote of the rank and file, represented that he has rehabilitated himself, and Mr. Green indorsed that assertion. In the view of the Department of Justice rehabilitation means, among other things, that the applicant has disassociated himself from criminals and other underworld characters.

THE FACT is Scalise has been for years a close associate of Little Augie Carfano, a notorious Brooklyn racketeer and gunman. He ran a garage racket union for Little Aug in Brooklyn, and in February, 1938, took a trip from Miami to Havana and back with Carfano. Another passenger both ways with Scalise and the gunman was Thomas Burke, who is the third vice president of the B. S. E. racket and who also muscled into his job following the assassination of an old Capone gorilla named Louie Alterie, in Chicago. Alterie was a pioneer in the labor department of the Capone rackets.

Still another passenger both ways, and the only other whose name appears on both passenger lists, was Charles Fischetti, which happens to be the name of a cousin of Al Capone. Fischetti among others, was being hunted a few days ago by the Chicago police. The others included Frank Nitti, the boss criminal of the new Capone mob, now engaged in the business of shoving his own brands of beer and highball water in the Miamis, in season, through a connection with another racket chartered by the A. F. of L.

THIS OTHER RACKET is the Waiters and Bartenders' Union. In Chicago this union is actually an extortion privilege or concession granted under the seal of the American Federation of Labor. In the Miamis it is run by Danny Coughlin, a brother-in-law of Capone and a guard at Capone's house. Nitti, of course, has other interests, including unions and the hoodlums' horse yard in Miami.

This winter Scalise, the rehabilitated man who had recently bought a mansion through a holding company at an investment of $35,000, all in currency, associated again with Little Aug and with Al Berlin, the official head of the Miami waiters and bartenders' racket. Berlin is proud of his acquaintance with Lepke Buchalter.

WHEN SCALISE was arrested recently he furnished, on a Sunday afternoon, $30,000 in currency and a check for $30,000 as surety for a bonding company which provided the $60,000 bonds for himself and his secretary, Miss Kay, which is an alias, or abbreviation of that lady's correct name. The check, drawn by a third person, was later withdrawn, and a check on the union's treasury was substituted. In Chicago, however, three members of the union's executive board insisted that there was no meeting of the board to consider any such proposal and that the $30,000 did not belong to the union. They may be merely uninformed, however, for Scalise, by the terms of the constitution, had authority to draw down the entire treasury for any purpose.

The source of the $60,000 is a secret of the racketeers, whose comrade, Scalise, was given a clean reputation by the president of the American Federation of Labor.

Text of Address to Party's Women

Says Candidates Must Meet Issues

By the Associated Press

The text of President Roosevelt's address to the National Institute of Government, conducted by the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, follows:

Two months ago I was told there would be a meeting of women interested in or affiliated with the Democratic Party, with the objective of studying and discussing the processes of our form of government. It was expected that there would be not more than 100 of them who would come to Washington and I suggested that they come to my executive office in order that I might shake their hands individually and have a little informal chat with them.

Three weeks ago my wife told me that the enthusiasm was so great that five or six hundred might come and we shifted the party to the East Room in the White House.

By ten days ago the gathering had grown into a pilgrimage, with the result that if you tried, the three or four thousand of you could not all get into the White House at the same time, and if I were to start shaking hands with you now you would still be passing in line long after dark.

This amazing and splendid outpouring does my heart good because it proves, first of all, that there is tremendous enthusiasm for a continuation of liberal democratic government in the United States, and also because it shows an honest wish to gain further knowledge of government.

Praises Discussion

May I add to that the thought I have expressed on several previous occasions—that while in the past seven years your Government has put into practical effect more constructive legislation for the average man, woman and child of the Nation than in any similar time in our history, the greatest ultimate long-range gain of these years lies in the increased knowledge of what government is all about, the increased discussion of broad problems and the increased recognition that the people of this country are entitled to a government which constantly thinks in terms of the people's needs.

We are coming to differentiate between fact and fiction. That in itself is a step in advance. We do not fall as easily as in older days for glittering generalities, for specious promises. We say in an election year to candidates for President and Vice President, and to "would-be" Senators and Representatives "quit condemning each and every act of this Administration and tell us just how you would change the laws if you were in power."

Issues Challenge

"You say you would balance the budget—you who oppose present policies—don't tell us that you would appoint some new committee or board to make recommendations. The budget is an open book. If it is to be balanced, you can do it in one of two ways or by a combination of both. You can levy new taxes, or you can cut appropriations. If you choose the former, what kind of taxes do you propose to levy? If you propose to cut expenditures, which ones will you cut and by what amount? Will you in these critical days lop off a billion dollars from our national defense? Will you in these critical days lop off a billion dollars for the care of the needy unemployed? Will you curtail expenditures for old-age pensions or unemployment insurance? Will you abolish the Securities and Exchange Commission and turn their functions over to the stock exchange? Will you end the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration? Will you destroy, by withdrawing appropriations, the soil conservation and tree-planting program of the Government?"

I recognize the horrid dilemma that questions of this kind are going to put certain types of candidates into in the coming six months.

Whoever the nominees of the two major parties are, I firmly believe that the real question, the honest question, the fundamental question of election day is going to be this: "Do you wish to employ for your bus line chauffeurs who wrecked the previous bus line by driving the old buses into the ditch or by going to sleep at the wheel—or are you going to continue the present policy of employing active, wide-awake chauffeurs who are inspired with the thought that their duty is to be polite to the passengers and see to it that they reach their destination in comfort and complete safety?

I am confident that your common sense, your enthusiasm and your deep understanding of the problems of the day will go far to keep the American people on the right road in this year of grace 1940.

The European Battle

"That's a pretty hot battle over there in Norway."

"Yeah. It's a tough league, that Scandinavian one. Who's ahead now?"

"I started to keep score, but I have to give it up. It's one of them seesaw fights. One side is out in front one minute and the other the next."

"From what I hear them Germans is getting pretty tight pitchin'."

"It looks that way in spots, but the other fellers are connecting with that old apple every now and then."

"What's that guy Hitler got, anyhow, besides a fast ball?"

"Nuthin'. He depends entirely on his speed ball. He ain't got no curve at all. But his fast one is a pip when it's workin'."

"It's okay till the other side gets on to it. Them British can murder a pitcher once they get wise to his delivery. I've seen 'em look like the Phillies lots of times for most of the game, and then start crashin' 'em out of the park like the Yanks."

"I was surprised to see the season open in Norway. It wasn't even on the schedule."

"That's Hitler all over. You got him tabbed for the opening game in one league and he shows up in another. Lookit what just happened! The schedule called for him to open at Maginot, and he turns up in Oslo. I never even heard of the Oslo club before. Where is it?"

"It's a minor league town in the Scandinavian League. Not as good as Jersey City and not as bad as Waterbury."

"It ain't as bad as it looked at first. It just wasn't ready; in fact, it wasn't even in training. It's the same way with the Bergen, Trondheim and Narvik clubs. And look at Stavanger."

"What club is he playin' on?"

"Stavenger is a town."

"There was a pitcher with a name like that on the Cleveland club a coupla seasons back. He was a southpaw. Say, do you think that Churchill feller is using his best men?"

"Sure he is. But he always looks bad at first. It's two different systems. The Churchills always play for one run at a time. Tight baseball, understand? The Hitlers always play to bust up the old ball game. But the Churchills are no pushovers. They got a strong infield, and they can hit."

"They ain't hitting much so far."

"Give 'em time. They're warm weather sluggers."

"Well, anyhow, it's one whale of a battle, and anybody can win."

"Yeah. You can't tell till midsummer. Whoever's out in front in that European league then will cop the flag in September."

President Roosevelt warns the young Democrats to beware of "sticky flypaper ideas." And in the height of any campaign anywhere in these wild days we should all look out for devices put out wholly as bug catchers.

Flypaper is too mild a thing in the war between the Democrats and the Republicans. Both sides will be yelling, "Quick the exterminator!" by July 15.

Civic Opera Defers May Program

Postponement of performances scheduled by the Civic Grand Opera Association for May 9, 10 and 11 in Constitution Hall was announced yesterday by the director, A. Conti Berenguer. According to his statement, withdrawal of cooperation by the Finnish Relief Fund, for the benefit of which the spring season was planned, has made it advisable to extend the time of the campaign for subscriptions.

Arrangements are now being made for production during the early summer of "Manon," "Luccia di Lammermoor" and the double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." There has been no change in the personnel of the casts, which includes Joseph Bentonelli, Susanne Fisher, Nicola Moscona and Pompilio Malatesta of the Metropolitan Opera, and Rosemarie Brancato and Garfield Swift, of Radio City Music Hall.

Fantastic NLRB Cases

THE HOUSE is about to debate proposed changes in the National Labor Relations Act. The reasons for change were brought out by an investigation of the Labor Board by a special committee of the House. Of the testimony given, only fragments have been printed by the newspapers. If the public were familiar with all the evidence, the public would be either shocked into indignation, or tickled into laughter. In either case, the public would realize that the Labor Relations Act, as administered by the Labor Board (and as in some cases upheld by some New Deal judges) is utterly inconsistent with common sense.

What is needed, here and in other areas, is enlightenment of the people. Of writing and talking about the Labor Act, there is no lack. But most of it deals with abstractions, theories, principles. What is needed are simple narratives of actual cases. These the man in the street would understand. Any writer willing to take the trouble to dig out some of the hundreds of stories in the records of the Labor Board, and willing to go through the toil of making these stories simple for the reader to understand, would do a service to the country. And such a writer,

CHAIRMAN MADDEN

Too bad his board didn't back up its attorney and establish the formula whereby every young man could have either a job or back pay without a job.

by the quality of his material—in some cases sensational, in others laughable, in almost all incredible—would find a good market for his stories.

ONE INCIDENT, which had almost the grace of fantasy, occurred in Kentucky some two years ago. I wrote about it at the time, but it bears retelling. The facts appear in the records of a hearing by the Labor Board in a case between CIO and the American Rolling Mill Co. (called in the hearing "Armco").

Guy Kirkman was an employe of Armco. He was a member of CIO. Mr. Kirkman had a son Harold. When Harold graduated from high school, in 1936, his father asked Armco to give the boy a job. Armco did not give the job.

So far, so good. Everything Mr. Kirkman or his son did was good, familiar American practice. It was after the Labor Board entered the situation that something very novel occurred.

Two years went by. In May, 1938, the Labor Board made a complaint against "Armco", charging that the company tried to prevent CIO from organizing its employes. In the complaint the Labor Board, among other charges, made this:

"On or about August 1, 1936, it (Armco) refused to employ Harold Kirkman because his father, Guy Kirkman, one of its employes, opposed its efforts to stifle union organization. . . ."

Upon this complaint the Labor Board held hearings. In the hearings the trial examiner asked the attorney for the Labor Board the specific question:

"Is it the Labor Board's contention that Harold Kirkman is seeking employment and the Labor Board is seeking an order to direct the respondent (Armco) to hire Harold Kirkman if you sustain the allegation of the complaint?"

TO THIS the attorney for the Labor Board replied: "We are seeking relief to the full extent of the National Labor Relations Act for Harold Kirkman. We are seeking affirmative relief for Harold Kirkman because of the discrimination against him."

In short, the charge was, that the company had refused to give the son a job, because the father was a member of CIO. And the position of the Labor Board attorney was, that if the board found this charge to be true the Labor Board should give the boy "affirmative relief because of the discrimination against him." The "affirmative relief" would be double: First, the boy must be given a job; second, the boy should be given "back pay for the two years he has not been employed by the company."

The attorney for the company was rather appalled. He said: "We can have every relative of a CIO man offer a complaint he has not been employed because of his CIO relative—because he is a relative of a CIO man we must take him because otherwise we are discriminating against him."

In subsequent proceednigs the higher officials of the Labor Board receded from the position taken by their attorney. But in other cases, similar and hardly less fantastic, the Labor Board has issued decisions requiring companies to give back pay. In some cases, companies have been required to give back pay for long periods, in one case approximately two years, to men who never in their lives had worked for the company.

IT IS RATHER a pity the Labor Board did not uphold its attorney's position in the case of that Kentucky boy. It would have established a perfect formula, an infallible technique, by which every young man could get a job, or get back pay without having a job. The technique would be:

Get dad to join CIO. Then go to dad's boss and ask for a job for yourself. Preferably make your request in such circumstances that the boss would not be likely to give you the job. Say to the boss, "Here, you old Tory, give me a job, and make it a good, easy one."

Then, when the boss does not give you the job, go to the National Labor Relations Board and charge that you were refused a job because your father belongs to CIO.

That, one would infer, is the way for any youth to get a job, or not to get a job but get pay for a job he did not get. Whether the formula extends to nephews, cousins or other degrees of consanguinity, does not appear.

President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday that more money should be authorized for the United States Housing Authority because it was doing a good job of slum clearance.

The National Coal Association, representing bituminous coal producers in 26 States, aligned itself yesterday with opponents of the Patman bill to tax chain stores.

Battle said the proposed tax might also bring about the closing of company stores near the mines, where miners obtained supplies on credit when unemployed, and that at any event the tax would come from the miners' pockets.

4,800 Delegates to Democratic Institute Mob First Lady on Visit to White House

Yowls of Pleasure Greet Her as She Risks Life and Limb in Walk Through Crowd Before Guards Rescue Her

By Dudley Harmon

If there's any grass left on the northwest corner of the White House lawn today, no one will be more surprised than Mrs. Roosevelt. For late yesterday afternoon she was the center of such a frantic jamming and pushing as could only be created by 4,800 eager and curious women.

They are here for the first National Institute of Government ever conducted by the women's division of the Democratic National Committee—or any political party, for that matter. The fact that 300 more registered at the last moment yesterday would indicate that an invitation to the White House garden party was the high spot of three days of highly organized activity.

When Mrs. Roosevelt descended from the White House portico into the mob on the lawn, the crowd positively yowled with pleasure.

"Doesn't she take it agreeably," said one woman. Another frantically waved a bunch of red roses in her hand, trying to present them to the First Lady. Finally three gold-braided aides locked arms together and with their help Mrs. Roosevelt gained a little hill and waved a smiling farewell.

Invited for 4:30, several hundred guests streamed in three-quarters of an hour ahead of time. One group arranged chairs near the scarlet-coated members of the Marine Band, who played on a platform in the center of the garden.

Badges Read 'Roosevelt'

As a delegate dashed across the grass to the portico, her friend was overheard to say, "Don't you think you should show some reserve about running on the White House lawn?"

The delegates were from every State, and their badges fluttered in the chill wind. Many of the badges read "Roosevelt" instead of naming a State. Nearly all wore corsages of some kind. All day the Board of Trade, pressed into service by the Democratic committee, had worked to find lodging for each and everyone.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who greeted the crowd from the portico before coming down, wore a handsome wool dress in Eleanor blue with a big check design in red, and a navy blue hat. When she descended to the lawn the First Lady donned a long cape of the same material as her dress.

Between 60 and 70 waiters and maids were stationed in three large tents, piling cookies on silver platters and pouring lemon punch from enormous stone containers. These were later served from three tables under gaily red and white striped marquees and centered with silver bowls of red tulips.

Incidentally, the White House garden is looking very well these days, with the big fountain playing in the middle and the beds of yellow jonquils and brilliant tulips.

Mrs. Miller Leads Flock

After his address, the President smiled pleasantly and said "Now, come in and visit." Though Mrs. Roosevelt urged the crowd not to tour the White House all at once, there was a rush inside, and hundreds of faces soon peered from the windows. The steps leading to the portico were a solid mass of women.

Mrs. Carroll Miller, sister of Senator Joseph Guffey, shepherded 683 from Pennsylvania about the lawn. Mrs. Thomas McAllister, chairman of the women's division of the committee, and Mrs. May Thompson Evans were among those on the portico, along with Miss Molly Dewson and Miss Nancy Cook, who is visiting the Fist Lady.

Others seen were Mrs. James Rowe and Mrs. Donald Hiss, among the volunteers who have been working at headquarters busily to see that the 4,800 found lodgings.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Exercise Helps To Develop Full Bust Contour

WITH THE line of fashion the line of the figure, the girl with the scanty bust contour is especially interested in any measure to increase and improve this portion of the figure.

But while brassieres can do a lot, one has never yet been designed that could solve the problem of underdevelopment of the chest, and, according to Mme. Adrienne, one of America's leading designers, that is often the trouble.

If the girls with the scanty chests develop this measurement, she says, their bust problems usually disappear in the process. When the bust contour is spoiled by the hollow between shoulder and bust, exercise is definitely indicated.

Exercise Recommended

She recommends the following bust exercise to strengthen the muscle tissue and fill out the hollows:

Lie face upward on a bed with the upper part of the body off the bed, head and arms dangling toward the floor. Slowly raise the arms upward, lifting the upper part of the body until it is in the same plane as the feet.

At the same time throw the chin far back and chew vigorously to increase the muscular pull on the chest and bust muscles, particularly the strands from throat to breasts. We don't need to tell you that the exercise is strenuous—you'll find it out! Increase the number of times it is performed very gradually.

If, in addition to a small bust, you have a high bony diaphragm or broad shoulders or a short torso, your problem is more difficult, and you will appreciate this expert's advice on the selection of the bra which will do the most for your figure.

Type of Bra

For the figure with the small bust and bony diaphragm, the bra must gently raise the bust up and out from the body as far as possible, thus making the diaphragm appear smaller. The long line, princess type of bra must be used to create the illusion of a long line from the tip of the breast to the waist.

For the type with broad shoulders and small bust, the shoulders appear larger than they actually are because of the smallness of the breasts. Padding can be used to increase the size, but it is more advisable to select a bra cut so that the surrounding tissue is gathered into the cup and thus increase the size of the measurement.

For the short torso type, the line from the shoulders to the tip of the breast should not be too long if the high bosom of youth is to be achieved. Particularly is this true for the short woman, who usually has a short torso! For this figure there should be as much uplift as possible without distorting the figure, so that the entire upper part of the body is foreshortened and the illusion of length created from the bustline down.

Betty Gram Swing, Leader in Suffrage Fight, Still Crusading in New York; Louise Bonney Manages a Fair Exhibit

New York, May 3.

THE RAYMOND Gram Swings live right near us here on Murray Hill, and Brother Swing now seems to be the most popular radio commentator on the European tragedy. Always a good newspaperman, the outbreak of war last fall turned him over to the studios, and now he makes "think talks" on this most difficult of wars to report. His wife, Betty, is no microphone widow, but keeps about as busy as her husband with writing and speaking.

BETTY GRAM SWING

Before her marriage she was Betty Gram, prominent as a newspaper woman and militant feminist. Raymond Swing was so proud of his new life that he added her surname to his own. I think this case of admiring devotion is unique. At least, I never heard of such a thing elsewhere. Mrs. Swing remembers her active suffrage days with considerable of a glow, and is quite willing to speak of the jails she adorned for the cause.

She was pinched in Washington in 1917—picketing the White House for feminine votes—and did a small bit in the Occoquan workhouse. She says she slept on straw-covered boxes there. In Boston, she drew a little stretch in the town's hoosegow—more suffrage zeal.

Just now the ardent Mrs. Swing is doing a lot of lecturing—the other day she spoke at our Town Hall on "Citizenship." All this time her devoted husband is busily knocking out his comment for the evening. All in all, it's a mighty busy and talented little family over here on Fortieth street. Never a dull or idle moment with the Raymond Gram Swings.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Louise Bonney is one of the town's busiest girls at the moment, since she is in charge of the new building at the Fair which will house new trends in furniture, drapes, ceramics and other aspects of home decoration. Louise rates the job, for she has vast experience in that field. Moreover, she was one of the original group to demand the big show for New York. I well remember the dinner in 1937 that really gave the thought its first big push. About 50 people sat down at table, and everyone was talking at once over the exciting idea that became a fact last summer . . . Opening scheduled a week from today, out there in Flushing, and there's a mighty lot yet to be done.

The local worshippers of Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt are happy again, with their idols again in town in Bob Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night." That married couple are absolutely sure fire on Broadway, and it's considered almost blasphemous to criticize them. They, with Katharine Cornell and Helen Hayes, form the "mustn't-touch" quartet in the New York theater. They can do no wrong.

Raisins Have Myriad of Uses in Cookery

PIONEER of all food weeks is Raisin Week, to be celebrated this year May 5 to 11. That means we'll all be browsing around for recipes to use raisins. And no longer is it necessary to soak dried fruits overnight, for the modern dried fruit is as up-to-the-minute as television and is appreciated as a most healthful, delicious, nutritionally valued food with myriad uses in cookery.

Crunchy whip is a company dessert on a budget which does not label itself as such, or may be used for a children's party. It has a different crunchy texture, and here is how you make it:

Crunchy Whip

Cover 1 cup raisins with boiling water for five minutes and drain. Combine the raisins with ½ cup orange juice, ¾ teaspoon grated orange rind, one-third cup sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt and heat to boiling. Moisten 2 teaspoons gelatin in 1 tablespoon cold water, add to the mixture, and stir to dissolve. Cool. Whip 1 cup cream stiff. Beat 1 egg until thick and creamy. Combine fruit mixture, whipped cream, beaten egg and 2 cups crumbled graham crackers, and blend lightly but thoroughly. Chill but do not freeze. Serves six.

Another pastry prize that will sharpen your appreciation of raisins is a raisin pie in which the fruit is blended in juicy filling, piquantly flavored with orange and sweetened with honey.

Raisin Pie Supreme

Combine 1 cup orange juice, 1 tablespoon lemon juice with two-thirds cup cold water, ½ cup honey, ¼ teaspoon salt, grated rind of ½ orange and heat to boiling. Moisten 2 tablespoons cornstarch in a little cold water and add to hot mixture. Rinse one and two-third cups raisins and stir into hot mixture. Line a deep pie pan with pastry, sprinkle flour over bottom, and filling and dot with butter; cover with top crust. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, 25 to 30 minutes. Serves six to eight.

New Straw May Be Vogue For Summer

The Men Discovered It, but the Women Took It Away From Them

IT is not always safe to prophesy in advance that such and such is going to be a hit fashion of the coming season—but there is one new style that should have overwhelming preference in Washington.

Marshall Adams

That is the coconut straw. From immediate sales of this hat we feel certain it will turn into the number 1 hat of the spring - summer season.

It's an idea that was taken bodily off men's heads and put on those of the eagerly waiting women. As the originator of this hat stated, when women began eyeing it possessively, "coconut straws are to good for men only, their wives and daughters have taken them to their own heads."

The coconut straw first "came out four years ago in Palm Beach where smartly groomed men all over Florida were quick to sense its casual, easy sun-burnt charm. Ever since 1937, the trade with the Bahamas and the States for the toasty colored sewn fibers has grown greater so that the coconut straw places this year as the top ranking hat for general all-around wear.

Now that the women have filched this straw from their husbands, we can not predict whether the would-be independent men will continue in their affections for this hat, but it is possible that there will be more twin acts now than ever, with husband and wife wearing identical straws. Many women's versions have the same striped, solid toned or polka dotted pugree bands with telescope or porkpie crowns, and snap brims. More feminine new editions have wider brims and contrasting streamers—just to be different.

Three Headless Bodies Found In Box-Car

One Has 'Nazi' Cut On Chest; Secret Society Suspected

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 3.—Headless bodies of three men, with the word "Nazi" carved on the chest of one in five-inch letters, were found today in boxcars assigned to the scrap heap in nearby Stowe township.

Authorities advanced one theory the three were victims of the "mad butcher of Kingsbury Run," blamed for 12 torso slayings in Cleveland, because of the similarity of the "butcher's" work. Two bodies had been dissected with the dexterity of a surgeon or a butcher.

Deputy Coroner Anthony Sappo said, however, the "mad butcher" angle was "confused" by the discovery of the word "Nazi" and a report that the boxcars had been on a Youngstown, Ohio, siding for a year before they were shipped to Struthers, Ohio, April 19, and on to Pittsburgh two days later. He added:

"The word Nazi indicates a possibility there might be some secret society, opposed to the Nazis, connected with the case."

All of the bodies, apparently those of men from 30 to 40 years old, were nude and there were no clews that might lead to their identity except some paper bags and a Youngstown, Ohio, newspaper dated December 11, 1939.

More than 50 other cars which arrived from Struthers on April 21 were checked but no other body was found.

Struthers is 15 miles from a New Castle, Pa., swamp where the headless body of a young man was found last October and eight other bodies have been discovered in the last 10 years.

Richard Whitney's Daughter Weds Henry A. Gerry

New York, May 3 (AP).—Nancy Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Whitney, and Henry Averell Gerry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livingston Gerry, were married today in the Church of the Epiphany.

Since the collapse of the Richard Whitney fortunes two years ago Miss Whitney had been working as a salesgirl in a smart Fifty-seventh street hat and gown shop. She attended the Brearley School here and Foxcroft School, Middleburg, Va.

Gerry, a 1906 Harvard graduate, is a grandson of the late Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry, philanthropist, financier and yachtsman, and descendant of an earlier Elbridge Gerry, who was a member of the Continental Congress, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, Governor of Massachusetts, Vice President of the United States and the inspiration of that peculiar political maneuver, "the Gerrymander."

Heiress Balks On Census Queries

Pittsburgh, May 3 (AP).—F. W. Konemann, area supervisor of the census, disclosed today that Helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late steelmaster, Henry Clay Frick, had twice refused to answer some of the census questions.

Konemann said he and an assistant area manager would attempt to get the information from Miss Frick, who is now in New York, and if they did not succeed her case would be referred to census officials at Washington.

Reno, Nev., May 3 (U.P.).—Mrs. Blanche Fairless, identified as the wife of Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel Corporation, is in Reno for a divorce, her attorney said tonight.

Methodists Affirm Stand Against War

Assail 'Absolute Sovereignty' Claims Of All Nations

Atlantic City, N. J., May 3 (AP).—The Methodist Church called upon the United States and other governments tonight to "surrender the claim of absolute national sovereignty" after the general conference had reaffirmed its opposition to war.

"Absolute national sovereignty," it was explained by Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, of Evanston, Ill., chairman of the committee which drafted the document, means "the claim that as a last resort a nation may do whatever it will for its own purposes, regardless of what effect it has on the rest of mankind."

The conference added it would not permit Methodist buildings to be used "in preparation for war" and asked consideration for conscientious objectors.

"There is no common judgment among Christians as to what a Christian should do when his own nation becomes involved in war," the declaration read. "On this issue, our own membership is divided. We believe, however, that the Christian church, in a world torn asunder by bitter conflict, must not permit itself to be divided over any matter . . ."

An amendment suggested by Dr. Harold P. Sloan, editor of the New York edition of the Christian Advocate, to make the pronouncement refer only to "aggressive" wars was overwhelmingly rejected.

Texas Precinct Meetings to Test 'Harmony' Today

As Texas prepared to test the Roosevelt-Garner "harmony" agreement at precinct meetings today throughout the State, House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn yesterday expressed confidence that the terms of the agreement would be approved.

Rayburn, loyal Roosevelt supporter and 1932 manager for Garner, said the compact between third term and Garner forces has pleased Democrats throughout the country "and has, in my opinion, added to the stature of Mr. Garner as a national figure."

The Texas Democratic precinct meetings pick delegates to the county meetings to be held in three days, and these in turn choose delegates to the State Democratic Convention at Waco on May 24.

The annual convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, meanwhile, at a meeting in Pittsburgh unanimously adopted a resolution opposing a third term.

But in Harrisburg a group of more than 200 Democratic county leaders resolved that "it is indispensable that the one who led the Nation out of bondage should continue to be its leader."

Apple Queen Smiles to 50,000 As Tractor Pulls Disabled Float

By Scott Hart
A Staff Correspondent

Winchester, Va., May 3—A mighty parade of 99 units passed for an hour and 50 minutes through these streets today and 50,000 persons saw Queen Shenandoah XVII keep poise when her blossom-dripping float broke down and had to be drawn by a small gray tractor.

The parade, big feature of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival's concluding day, moved between sidewalks crowded to the building sides and to the blare of 50 musical organizations.

An early east wind lowered the temperature to about 45 degrees, the skies were cloudy, and the princesses, riding two floats, decided in the main to wear cloaks because their costumes were so flimsy.

Police at the corner of Cameron and Piccadilly streets had to rush out a drunk who got mixed Metropolitan Police Drill Team among the festival's attractions.

The mechanical mishap to the Queen's float—which was adorned with thousands of blossoms arranged by school-child hands—occurred before the parade moved off from Cameron street, the starting point. The tractor was brought up, and all the way to the reviewing stand the Queen smiled and bowed.

The Queen, Miss Lillian Somoza, daughter of the Nicaraguan President, and turned 18 today, had accepted her sovereignty over the valley apple lands in ceremonies here Thursday. The slight silver crown was placed on her dark hair by Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady in an action interpreted as a joint tribute to a "good neighbor" country and the valley apple.

A student at Gunston Hall, Washington, the queen has undergone a tiring social round since arriving here Wednesday. But she showed no strain today as the vast sound, color and excitement billowed about her in the triumphal ride.

Onlookers, who came from all the farming lands about Winchester and from many States, gave the Shenandoah (Va.) County School Band—dressed in green and white uniform—a big ovation. The organization, it was said, must disband because of lack of sustaining funds. They cheered the gray-uniformed John Marshall High School Cadet Band, of Richmond. But mostly they whooped for the dark-eyed queen.

They cheered Jeff and Kidron, ages 30 and 31, respectively, war horses of Gen. Pershing that were brought here from the Army remount station at Front Royal, Va. They applauded Miss Rebecca Morgan, of Charleston, W. Va., who was sent by the Governor to represent the State. Miss Morgan rode in a car, nibbling a good Valley apple. Other pretty girls tossed apples from their cars.

Queen's Birthday Celebrated

At head of the line rode Dr. Lewis M. Allen, the grand marshal, and a horse breeder of national renown. Behind him were 35 floats; the visiting volunteer firemen, the former service men's organizations, the drum and bugle corps, the floats of the Winchester Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis and Elks clubs and cadets and commercial exhibits.

Earlier, a luncheon was served celebrating the queen's birthday, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Steck. Circuit Judge Philip Williams entertained at a stag luncheon with a number of Washingtonians as his guests.

The crowd here today exceeded considerably the crowd of the opening day. Visitors are expected to pour into this city again within a week when the millions of apple trees in the Valley orchards take bloom.

Alexandrians Guard Float

The Alexandria American Legion guard of honor, with massed colors, marched in the parade beside the queen's float.

Handley High School's pageant, "The Quest of Beauty," was not repeated today because of a morning drizzle.

The appearance of the floats occupied by the queen and princesses drew widespread favorable attention. These were designed by Miss Katherine L. Pannell, art instructor at Handley High School.

Increased Domination By Government Cited In Wichita Address

By International News Service

Wichita, Kans., May 3.—District Attorney Dewey of New York City, campaigning for the Republican Presidential nomination, warned tonight that increased Government domination might lead America toward totalitarianism.

In an address at Friends University, which had been postponed four days because of his illness, Dewey said:

"We face a real danger in the opportunity which hte complexities of our modern ecoLomic system give to Government to secure dominance over a large seciton of our population. Once the relations of a government to its people become such that the people are subservient, we have laid the foundations of totalitarianism."

Quakers Complimented

Dewey complimented the Quakers for their part in promoting individual integrity and the healthy growth of individual character, with the people as masters of the Government.

"For over a century this conception of government and society deeply influenced the aspirations of peoples in all parts of the world," he said. "But now we are met by a resurgence of naked power politics, a political atavism of sinister import.

"In too many countries the creed is proclaimed that the individual is unimportant, and in its stead nation, race or class is held up to reverence . . .

"The harvests of these false philosophies are now being reaped by the people in irreligion, war, and the destruction of the dignity and happiness of the individual. Such are the inevitable consequences of elevating race, state, nation or government to the position of supreme value. Such a creed is bound to lead to war."

U. S. Threat Is Seen

The New York prosecutor said the individual in America is already threatened by forces which tend to destroy his independence, and added that "government itself is one of these threatening forces x x x.

"Government, in serving its people, should not be allowed to create the impression that it is itself a benevolent provider to whom all gratitude is due. The food that is eaten, the clothing that is worn, the shelter that is provided, are all the product of the labor of some other human beings, the fellow citizens of those for whom the government thus makes provision. The Government itself creates none of this. Government, when it renders aid, renders it as the agent for the people of the country."

Victor Berger's Widow Quits Socialist Party

Milwaukee, May 3 (AP).—Mrs. Meta Berger, widow of Victor L. Berger, one of the founders of the modern Socialist Party in the United States, resigned from the party today.

"I find myself out of sympathy with the inglorious role the party is playing at this time when civil liberties in America are being destroyed before our eyes, and when peace is so desperate an issue," she wrote in a letter to the county Socialist executive committee.

"I cannot in decency run with a pack that howls for the blood of red witches when the very hunt is a violation of the liberties by which we Socialists survive."

Missing 5 Days, Man and Girl Are Found With Throats Cut

Blood-Stained Auto Is Discovered 100 Miles Away

By the Associated Press

Stockton, Calif., May 3.—A Stockton youth and his girl companion, their throats cut and their arms and legs trussed, were found dead in a field today.

Nathan Chinchiolo, 23, member of a well-known Stockton family, and Dorothy Woofter, 19, of nearby Tracy, disappeared Sunday. Worried parents reported their absence next day.

Monday night the automobile in which they were last seen was found abandoned in Fresno, 100 miles away, with a bloodstain on the seat and a window broken.

Chinchiolo had been bound with a belt from the girl's coat and with strips of its lining. He had been gagged. Miss Woofter's hands were tied behind her back.

Dr. Orrin Fry, general autopsy surgeon of the Jan Joaquin General Hospital, said death was caused by the throat wounds.

The district attorney's office questioned at least 10 persons acquainted with the young couple but gave no indication of any suggested motive for the killings.

Frank Chinchiolo, brother of the slain youth, got word of the tragedy in Fresno, where he had gone after discovery of the automobile. He appeared stunned and said he had not the slightest idea what motive could have inspired the attackers.

Chicago Jury Hears Scalise Took Million

Dewey's Assistants Obtain Records Of Union Expenses

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 3.—The State's attorney's office in Chicago continued today its own investigation of the books and records of George Scalise, resigned president of the Building Service Employes International Union, as the Cook County grand jury, in Illinois, heard further evidence that Scalise, indicted here for extortion and conspiracy, had privately disposed of between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 of union funds.

Chicago officials, while conducting the investigation partly to discover any possible violations of Illinois laws, were in close cooperation with the office of District tAtorney Dewey. Two of Dewey's assistantants were in Chicago, and it was learned they had obtained photostatic copies of certain books of the union, which maintains its headquarters in Chicago.

It was also learned that a squad of New York detectives will go to Atlantic City Monday during the convention of the International Union so as to afford "general protection to certain people."

Kenneth Ashley, a $325-a-month bookkeeper, testified today before the Chicago grand jury that Scalise had spent more than $1,000,000 in union funds on his own order in three years. According to William G. Crawford, assistsant State's attorney, Ashley was called as the union employe who signed checks through which Scalise drew union funds.

A.F.L. Unions Assail New McGehee Bill

Charges Revised Measure Cuts Benefits to Workers By 20 Per Cent

The battered McGehee bill for amending the District unemployment compensation act yesterday was attacked by the Central Labor Union, which had indorsed the previous McGehee bill, thereby increasing the likelihood that it will be further amended or pigeon-holed in the House District Committee on Monday.

Hopes for an amicable settlement of the differences over the "liberalizing" amendments were fading on Capitol Hill as the second attack was launched on the measure with the threat of invoking the labor lobby in an effort to defeat the measure if it is brought unrevised on the House floor next District day.

Following a blistering criticism of the bill by the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, the Central Labor Union announced that it is "unalterably opposed to the latest amendments to the unemployment compensation law."

McGehee Defends Compromise

Arthur L. Schoenthal, chairman of the legislative committee of the union, also replied to criticism Thursday night of the A. F. of L. by Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. council. The A. F. of L., Katz contended, had supported the former McGehee bill, which was "less liberal" than the current measure.

Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, in reply to Katz' statement that his bill would reduce the employe benefits in some classifications, insisted that the "compromise" bill would represent gains for many unemployed persons.

"Mr. McGehee's bill is wholly unsatisfactory to the Central Labor Union," said Schoenthal, "because, while it does give employers a slight reduction in tax, it also unwarrantably reduces the benefits even below what the present law provides.

"Under the committee bill, according to our calculations, benefits would be reduced on an average of about 20 per cent and would be available for a shorter period of time.

Blames Business Groups

"We consider that the laboring people in the District have been poorly treated, so say the least, by this latest effort of the judiciary subcommittee, because while we have been working for a liberal amendment of the present law we are absolutely unable to understand the reason for the vicious bill approved by the subcommittee.

"Originally the McGehee bill, H. R. 7926, was approved by labor, business and the Unemployment Compensation Board. It was at the behest of business groups that this bill was taken from the calendar in an effort to amend the tax provision. If this bill had been allowed to stand as it was then approved, we would probably not be now apprehensive about the possibility of any amendment at this session."

Mrs. Eloise Smith, Former Pension Bureau Head, Dies

Mrs. Eloise Hughes Smith, former head of the War Veterans Pension Bureau and one of the survivors of the Titantic disaster, died yesterday in Cincinnati, Ohio, according to the Associated Press.

Mrs. Smith was returning from a wedding trip in Europe after her marriage to Lucien P. Smith, of Uniontown, Pa., when the ship sank April 15, 1912. Her husband assisted her into a lifeboat, the same in which the late Mrs. John Jacob Astor reached safety, according to accounts, and was himself listed among the 1,513 victims of the disaster.

Mrs. Smith was the daughter of the late Representative and Mrs. James A. Hughes. She made her debut here in 1910.

Syphilis War Inadequate, Everett Says

Personnel Lacking To Fight Disease, Secretary of Social Hygiene Unit Holds

To cut down syphilis in Washington to a minimum, a program which will treat six times as many patients must be provided, Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society of the District, told more than 200 at the annual dinner of the organization at Barker Hall last night.

"At present the facilities and personnel of the Health Department clinic are inadequate to such an extent that rarely does a patient receive a physical examination other than a blood test, and less than one-half of the new patients are given even an educational conference," Everett said. He declared that the average time spent on each new patient is only from three to five minutes.

"Inadequacy Means Death"

Approximately 12 per cent of the new syphilis patients and 20 per cent of the new gonorrhea patients discontinue treatment within a month after their admission to the clinic, he stated.

"This great inadequacy in case holding means suffering, disability and death for many infected individuals and increased expenses to the taxpayers who pay the bills for dependents left penniless," he said.

He pointed out that in spite of the expanded venereal disease program in the last few years, only $46,000 was allocated to venereal disease control in the District.

"Therefore, for every $10 spent in institutionalization of insane syphilitics in the District, only $1 is spent for the prevention of such tragedies," he said.

Controlled in Army

How the American Expeditionary Force in France demonstrated to the world that venereal disease could be controlled in large armies was described by Dr. Hugh H. Young, of Johns Hopkins University. While other forces regarded these diseases as necessary evils, he said, the medical service of the United States Army held infected men near their posts during treatment and refused to permit syphilitics to return home until cured.

"The 2,000,000 soldiers returning," he said, "were probably the greatest body of healthy men the world has ever known." He gave much credit to Gen. John J. Pershing, A. E. F. commander.

Elected to the board of directors for the 1940-43 term were Birch E. Bayh, Dr. Edith S. Coale, Albert E. Conradis, Paul B. Cornely, Dr. Lewis C. Ecker, Dr. Robert S. Lamb, Mrs. Julius Lansburgh, Dr. William J. Mallory, Mrs. Lawrence Martin, Benjamin M. McKelway, Beatrice Mullin, Vincent Saccardi, Esther Scott, Dr. Daniel Seckinger and Mrs. Walter S. Ufford.

Health Chiefs Plan Meeting At Rio in '42

Sanitary Engineers Draft Tentative Conference Program

Looking two years ahead, the Pan American Conference of National Directors of Health yesterday drafted plans for a sanitary engineering conference tentatively set for Rio de Janeiro in 1942.

A committee was appointed on final arrangements, consisting of Dr. Joao de Barros Barreto, of Brazil; William Boaz, chief sanitary engineer of the Pan American Safety Bureau, and W. M. Dashiel, United States Public Health Service.

Latest methods in training public health personnel were described to the delegates, meeting in the Pan American Union Building, by Dr. Joseph W. Mountin, of the United States Public Health Service, and Dr. Martha M. Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau.

The exhibits illustrating public health activities of the 20 Latin-American republics will remain open to the public until next Wednesday.

Most elaborate displays are those of Mexico, which was driven here from Mexico City in a Federal ambulance, and Venezuela.

The ambulance crew on the 2,800-mile trip consisted of Manuel de Sevilla, head of the motion picture division in the Mexican department of health; Francisco Corona, secretary to Dr. Jose Siurob, chief of the Mexican delegation, and Socorro Jiminez, assistant to Dr. Siurob.

"It was an uneventful trip," said de Sevilla, "up to the time we entered Virginia. Then, somewhere this side of Roanoke, we came upon a burning house and helped firemen put it out."

German Loses $500,000 Suit Against U. S.

Court Orders Him To Pay $250,000 To Government

Johann Carl Isenberg, 70, Travenort, Germany, yesterday lost his fight to regain $500,000 from the Government and instead was ordered by the District Court to pay $250,000 to the United States.

Isenberg claimed he was born in Hawaii, became an American citizen when this country annexed the territory in 1900, and spent the World War in Germany through the misfortune of having been caught there and unable to get away. His property was seized on the ground that he was an enemy alien.

Justice Jennings Bailey, however, accepted the assertions of Special Assistant Attorney General F. B. Wiener that Isenberg was naturalized in Germany in 1900 after having been there 12 years, fought for Germany in the World War and traveled on a German passport.

Consequently, the court said, Isenberg was an enemy alien, and what he had already obtained, after getting a ruling in 1931 that he was an American, was obtained by fraud and must be restored to the United States. The 1931 ruling was made, the court found, without a full statement of the facts.

100 Unite For Primary In District

Darr Heads Group To Fight for End Of 'Star Chamber' Delegate Choice

Nearly 100 District Democrats organized the Independent Democratic Association last night at Carpenters Hall, elected officers and pledged themselves to a fight to replace "star chamber" selection of convention delegates with selection by primary.

Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, was elected president. Others selected were Arthur Clarendon Smith, first vice president; Thomas H. R. Clarke, second vice president; P. A. Shugrue, secretary, and Robert T. Highfield, treasurer, all without opposition.

Suffrage Involved, He Says

The primary purpose of the organization, Darr explained, would be to . . . bring about a fair, open and competitive election of delegates from the District of Columbia to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago to be held in July." This primary election, he added, "is closely related to the general question of suffrage in the District. I hope we can bring about a public demand so great it will force the committee to set up the machinery for a fair election."

The association, Darr emphasized, will not "indorse as an organization any candidates for the Democratic nomination for President or Vice President of the United States or support any individual candidate" or "engage . . . in any activity which has for its . . . purpose the accomplishment of any of those things."

Lauds Roosevelt

"I assume it goes without saying," he said, "that anyone who joins this or any other Democratic organization subscribes to the view that if the Democratic Party is to be successful in the coming national elections it must be led by a man of progressive and liberal principles who will carry forward the ideals of democracy and the preservation of human rights in the United States of America as carried on during the past seven years by our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Emory B. Smith, an attorney, and Shugrue also spoke.

Under terms of a resolution proposed by Harry S. Wender, the new officers will name a board of directors, select an executive committee and adopt a constitution. By direction of last night's meeting the constitution will provide for membership without dues.

Cave Hunters Plan Trip

The Speleological Society of Washington will visit Needys Cave, near Waynesboro, Pa., tomorrow. The cave "has an active stream and offers opportunities for climbing and swimming," said the announcement. Arthur Lembeck, 3434 Eads street northeast, will lead the party, limited to 15 persons.

Red-Letter Day

Mount Vernon Place to Lay School Building Cornerstone

Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, second largest Protestant congregation in the city, tomorrow will mark a red-letter day in its fascinating history, as the $120,000 educational building's cornerstone is laid.

While there will be special addresses at the morning and evening worship rites, long speeches have been barred from the actual stone-laying ceremony at 4 p. m., when organization leaders of the church and Sunday school will briefly describe what the new structure will mean to their unit, and each place a memento in the tin box inside the cornerstone.

K street between Ninth and Tenth streets northwest, scene of the ceremony, will be closed to traffic, and amplifiers will carry the words and music to the hundreds of people expected to attend. The vested young people's choir and the adult chorus will sing outside under Deane Shure's direction, while the musical accompaniment floats through a window of the church from a piano on the inside.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Church, will preside. Pastors and congregations of neighborhood churches have been invited to participate.

They will include Dr. William S. Abernethy, president of the Washington Ministerial Union and Calvary Baptist pastor; Dr. Edward H. Pruden, First Baptist pastor and president of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church. Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce; Judge Eugene Black, Col. A. R. Brindley, Dr. Clifton P. Clark, Henry G. Thomas and Arthur E. Martin also will take part.

Bishop Charles Claude Selecman, former president of Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Tex., will speak at the 11 o'clock services, and Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, resident prelate of the Methodist Church, at 8 p. m. Both will hasten from the General Methodist Conference at Atlantic City to take part. Bishop Selecman is affiliated with the South Central jurisdiction of the Methodist Church.

The new building, outgrowth of a dream of many years, will embody ample facilities for accommodating one of Washington's most rapidly growing churches.

They will include class and assembly rooms to accommodate a completely departmentalized church school of 1,800 enrollment and average attendance of 1,400, a recreation hall, banquet and social hall, modern spacious and fully-equipped kitchen, dramatic hall with stage and dressing rooms, and choir and music directors' room. The structure will face on K street, but will also have an entrance on Massachusetts avenue.

Dwellings on K street and Massachusetts avenue which the congregation began to purchase back in 1922 were recently wrecked to make way for the new project. The architects are Z. T. Hamilton and John E. Williams, and the consultants, Dr. Henry E. Tralle and Rossell E. Mitchell.

The building committee includes Dr. Rustin, A. E. Martin, chairman, Dr. Clifton P. Clark, Mrs. Ida R. Groover, A. F. Harlan, B. C. Palmer, John Brayshaw, needs unit; Judge Eugene Black, Earl Carson, Henry G. Thomas, Justice Bolitha J. Laws, W. D. Johnson and J. W. Rodkey, finance unit, and Talma L. Smith, R. C. Smith, B. S. Embry, Walter A. Graham and Paul H. McMurray, plans unit.

Long known as the South's representative church, and now a member of the united Methodist body, Mount Vernon Place Church moved to the present location near the Central Library back in 1869, worshiping in a brick building there for 60 years until the erection of the present marble edifice in 1918. Dr. W. V. Tudor was the first pastor, leading the congregation when it met in a frame building on M street.

It was in May, 1906, that the General Conference of the Southern Methodist Church authorized plans for erection of a representative church here, the project being launched 12 years later. It was during and after the World War years when the congregation made great strides under the leadership of Dr. Clovis Chappell.

Today the same church is constantly growing under the inspired leadership of Dr. Rustin, with a church membership of 3,200 and a church school enrollment of more than 1,300.

Pastor at Christian Envisions Cheverly Community Church

Section Described As 'Ideal' but Project Is in Embryonic Stage

By Robert Tate Allan.

A community church may be launched in Cheverly, Md., in the not too distant future, the Rev. Kenneth Buker, pastor of the Disciples of Christ Church there, said yesterday.

While the project is still in the embryonic stage, there is much favorable community sentiment for such a venture, he pointed out, describing the section as "ideal" for it in many ways.

For example, he said, the worshipers of the nearby Kenilworth Presbyterian Church, of which he was once pastor, often visit the Cheverly Church for the evening rites, and the Kenilworth young men's class often drops in for a neighborly "hour."

Because the Rev. Mr. Buker, who served at Kenilworth for eight years until January, 1939, does not believe a pastors formal severance of connecitons with a congregation should mean losing interest in the old friends, he mixes with the Kenilworth group quite frequently, and recently addressed the youth dinner there. Last Wednesday the two congregations staged a "ripsnorting" spelling bee as a benefit for renovations in the Cheverly Church.

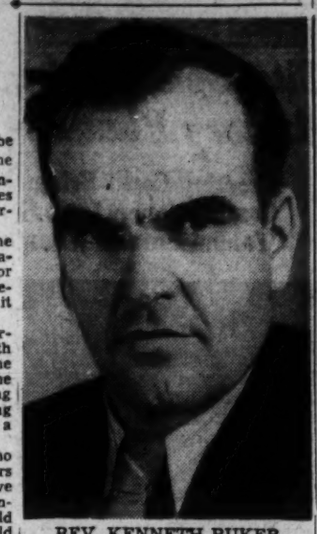
Mrs. Alice Kirk, head of the Woman's Missionary Society at Cheverly Church, also teaches a young women's class at the Kenilworth Church. The Rev. E. H. Shofstall is pastor of that church.

Many of the Cheverly Church's men expect to take an active role in the eleventh annual convention of the Maryland Federation of Men's Bible Classes today and tomorrow in Hyattsville, the Rev. Buker himself being chairman of the parley.

Among the most active Bible leaders in this section, he teaches a mixed adult class in his church school, is active in the work of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, the religious work department of the Central Y. M. C. A., the Men's Club of the "Y," and other groups.

When Kenilworth pastor he often escorted virtually all his congregation to the Labor Day week-end conclave of the Bible Association on the Western Maryland College campus.

His enthusiastic supporters at the Cheverly Church include Benjamin F. Shaw, president of the adult class; J. Victor Dickey, builder by profession and builder of character through his young people's class, and former Sunday School head; Edwin Harman, organist and chairman of the church board, and Mrs. B. Shaw, primary department supervisor.



REV. KENNETH BUKER

Native Vermonter and son and brother of clergymen, the Rev. Buker studied at George Washington University and American University Graduate School, the Mount Hermon (Mass.) Theological School, and for the past three years has been studying at the Columbia College of Christian Education here. He is an employe of the Internal Revenue Department.

His twin brothers are missionaries in Burma. One, Raymond, was a member of the 1924 American Olympic team. Richard is a medical missionary. The Cheverly clergymen and Mrs. Buker reside at 2637 Myrtle street northeast, and have three children—Barbara, 19; Kenneth, jr., 17; and Joyce, 9.

The Cheverly Church, located about a mile from the Beaver Dam Country Club, was organized more than a half-century ago through the efforts of Henry Brewood, well-known local businessman and church leader. Formerly connected with Ninth Street Christian Church, Mr. Brewood now attends Mount Rainier Christian Church.

"JUST AS I AM, WITHOUT ONE PLEA"

CHARLOTTE ELLIOTT

Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me
And that Thou bidd'st me come to Thee
O Lamb of God, I come.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn—so simple, so truthful, so fervent, was written by one who suffered fifty years of invalidism. How else but through great faith could she have borne her burden so nobly.

New 'Kildare' Film Opens on Capitol Screen

Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres Costarred; 'Funzafire' Zany Revue

By Richard L. Coe

"DR. KILDARE'S STRANGE CASE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story by Max Brand and Willis Goldbeck, adapted to the screen by Harry Ruskin and Mr. Goldbeck, co-starring Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres, with Laraine Day, Shepperd Strudwick, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Nat Pendleton, Walter Kingsford, Alma Kruger, John Eldredge, Nell Craig, George H. Reed, Marie Blake, Marcia Mae Jones, Charles Waldron and Frank Orth. Directed by Harold S. Bucquet. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Those trained seals of the medical circus, Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres, are being put through their paces at the Capitol Theater this week in an extension of their familiar quick - doctor - the - insulin tricks, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case."

On the Capitol stage, in the balcony, in the loges and on the orchestra floor, Benny Meroff and his orchestra head a mad revue titled "Funzafire," which is most enjoyably introduced by a spotlessly attired Art Brown at the organ.

Standing by itself, "Dr Kildare's Strange Case" would very likely be an acceptable film. In the gruff but loving medico of Mr. Barrymore and the earnest, clean-looking assistant of Lew Ayres, the film has two leading figures which are striking characters. The patient nurse, the rich young doctor, the loving parents of our hero, are serviceable. In fact, the only new angle in any of the four "Kildare" films has been the symptoms with which each new set of patients suffers and the isolated cure upon which our slightly baffled hero stumbles. But four in a row makes for monotony.

Although we have no pretensions to being an eminent neurologist, there can be little doubt that in his reasoning, to bring back an insane man into a more or less sane world, young Kildare hits on an idea that is a pip. The patient thinks he's trapped in Wednesday and wants, very vociferously, to get to Friday. So Kildare remembers his evolution, gives him a shot of this, a dose of that, watches the patient squirm and observes to the love-starved attendant nurse that the lower man in their charge is struggling to rise "like an ape might cling to a tree."

Of course, Dr. Kildare gets his opportunity to strike out for himself, but he knows that if he left gruff Gillespie now, he would never become a great diagnostician. Laraine Day, Shepperd Strudwick, Alma Kruger and Walter Kingsford go through their roles with accustomed awareness and the two stars are, as usual, exactly right, with Ayres even taking on some of the Barrymore habits.

Art Brown Continues

After one has seen the discouraging newsreel of war in Norway, however, "Dr. Kildare's Strange Case" will be more thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated as the purely escapist trifle that it is.

To set the mood for a slap-happy stage revue, Art Brown plays his "Everybody Sing" offerings in reverse order. The songs are amusing, the novelty still fresh. Sam Jack Kaufman leads the Capitol Orchestra in Chaikovski's "Marche Slav."

If, during these proceedings you observe that your neighbor is an ape, that he is typewriting or that a screaming woman is bellowing in your ear, be not afraid. It's just part of the show, just as is that snappy trick of leading the chorus gals over to a fellow sitting in the third row. They kiss him, each and every one, and all he needs to do is sit there. Third row, center section, left aisle.

Benny and his stooges sing, play, dance, juggle, tumble and imitate primitive people. And they do it all very well.

RKO Buys One For Lee Marcus

"The Stranger on the Third Floor," an original screen play by Franke Partos, has been purchased by RKO Radio Pictures and has been turned over to Lee Marcus, production executive, for his supervision. Partos also has been engaged by the studio to make certain revisions in the script.

Strongly dramatic in theme, "The Stranger on the Tihrd Floor" recounts the experiences of a young newspaper reporter wrongfully suspected of murder.

"Dark Command" Brings Exciting, Semi-Historical Drama to Earle

Trio of Stars Interpret Story Of Early Kansas; Tidy Stage Revue

"DARK COMMAND." Republic picturization of the novel by W. R. Burnett, adapted to the screen by Grover Jones, Lionel Houser and F. Hugh Herbert, costarring John Wayne, Claire Trevor and Walter Pidgeon, with Roy Rogers, George Hayes, Porter Hall, Marjorie Main, Raymond Walburn, Joseph Sawyer, Helen MacKellar, J. Farrell MacDonald and Trevor Bardette. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Reviewed Friday morning. At the Earle Theater.

"Dark Command," Republic's most pretentious production since "Man of Conquest," on view at the Earle Theater this week, combines all of the elements of a riproaring "Western" with pseudo-historical drama in effective and exciting fashion. It goes in for rugged and tempestuous action, packed with fist fights and gunplay. Under the direction of Raoul Walsh, one of the veterans of his craft, the film fulfills its intended function sufficiently well to prevent any audience from lolling back in its chairs for a comfortable snooze. The picture moves at high velocity practically throughout its length.

BELL

Based on the story by W. R. Burnett, "Dark Command" deals with the tumultuous days in Kansas immediately preceding the War Between the States and during the early days of that civil conflict, when both North and South were migrating to the rich new territory to dominate its political destiny. Against this swirling background is unfurled a triangular love story, embracing a daughter of the South, an illiterate cowhand from the plains of Texas and an Ohio school teacher.

Teacher Turns Bandit

When Bob Seton, the fearless and honest young plainsman, defeats William Cantrell—an authentic figure in history, by the way—for the post of town marshal, the wily young educator takes what he deems the "easy way" to acquire riches and social standing. He becomes first a slave-runner, then a gun-runner and, finally, at the outbreak of the war, plunders supply trains and engages in vicious guerrilla warfare under the uniforms of both the South and the North. He and his band of desperadoes plunder the State from one end to the other. For a considerable favor done her hot-headed brother, Mary McCloud marries the renegade. But, as the short-reels say, "crime does not pay" and Cantrell loses his life after his mother has been ambuscaded by his own men, while trying to persuade her son to renounce his brigandage and become a decent citizen. That makes it virtually perfect for Bob and Mary.

In the role of Seton, John Wayne gives further evidence of ability that transcends the demands of "horse opera," just as he did in "Stagecoach." His performance is subdued and forceful. Claire Trevor performs with spirit and no regard whatever for the gentler nuances that might mark her portrayal. As Cantrell, Walter Pidgeon completes the stellar trio with a performance that is nicely gaited and true to a pretty contemptible character.

Roy Rogers, Marjorie Main, Porter Hall, George "Gabby" Hayes and Raymond Walburn lead the large and competent supporting cast.

Stage Revue Is Agreeable

This week's stage revue is one of Harry Anger's evenly balanced offerings, with no outstanding "smash" act to knock the customers out of their pews. The most substantial hits are scored by Tommy Riggs and his mythical Betty Lou, Hildegarde, a singer-pianist of no mean stature, and those old-time reliables, Shaw and Lee, in their familiar crossfires and lunatic pantomimes. The Honeys—six of them—open the bill with some A-1 dancing and acrobatics. The Roxyettes, of course, are in and out with a variety of routines, the most novel being the "Puss 'n' Boots" number.

A Grantland Rice "Sportlight," called "Playmates from the Wilds"—meaning a flock of tame otters—and the Paramount News supplement a rousing feature that is better than you might suspect.

Stars of 'Stagecoach' Reunited

JOHN WAYNE AND CLAIRE TREVOR

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 3.

SHIPPING DEPARTMENT: When the Ile de France sailed for "an unknown destination" Wednesday, the newspapers reported that there were two passengers aboard . . . But there was a third one. He made his farewells, an hour before the sailing, to all his friends here. He's Rene Blum, brother of Leon Blum.

CRIME DEPT.: To all the people who once had been his friends and associates, the man who brought to America the French movie, "Couriere de Lyons," soon will show an advertisement which will feature only the foreword used in that picture. . . . That foreword read: "Witnesses, stupid and afraid, will continue to betray innocent people to 'Justice' and punishment. No one is immune. One's past, however honorable, is no protection. A thousand recent examples prove it. May this teach men, on whom depend the liberty, life and honor of one of their kind, that their errors will seek them out and that often it will be irreparable." . . . The man who presented that film here, and who will advertise that foreword, is the recently reprieved Albert N. Chaperau.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Russel Crouse, coauthor of "Life With Father," is receiving offers from a number of Hollywood studios, and the deal is being negotiated for him by Leland Hayward, the agent . . . "If all the offers are for the same money, sign me with Paramount," Crouse told Hayward. "Because they have wonderful pie in their commissary."

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: Wednesday night, at the Waldorf, a dinner was held in honor of veterans who had been engaged in the moving picture industry 25 years ago . . . Among the guests was Harry Richman—because, in 1915, he sang in movie houses; Justice Ferdinand Pecora, who was a motion picture operator; Hobart Bosworth, who is the oldest living film actor; and A. P. Giannini, the banker, from whom exhibitors borrowed money with which to buy theater seats, 25 years ago. "I'm still in the seat phase of the movies," said Giannini, "but now I lend money to studios to help fill those seats."

WAR DEPT.: John Payne, the screen star, flew to New York to replace the ailing Richard Greene on the Kate Smith radio show. He was accompanied by Orr, of MGM, and they discussed the international situation—denouncing Hitler and his Axis partner, Mussolini. . . . They spied another passenger, sitting alone, decided to be hospitable, and restated their arguments for him. "So—don't you agree? It's terrible, about Hitler and Il Duce," they suggested . . . "No, I don't agree," the stranger insisted. . . . "But why?" Payne asked. . . . "You will learn why later," was the reply. . . . Payne learned why later—he is the military adviser to the Italian Embassy.

LOCAL NEWS: Alice Hughes and her husband, Leonard Hall, will write a joint column. It will be called "Mr. & Mrs. Manhattan" . . . Archibald MacLeish, the Librarian of Congress, is one of the stockholders of P. M. . . . The Hakim Bros., who took a $5,000-a-month option on the screen rights of "Ladies & Gentlemen," have dropped it—after two payments . . . The National Association of America Composers & Conductors will give its 1940 Award to station WNYC . . . Dr. Morris Fishbein, head of the A. M. A., has written to Time, contesting the validity of statements made in the new play, "Medicine Show." The producers are submitting documents, in reply.

FOREIGN NEWS: Noel Coward, who arrived on Monday, attended the premiere of Robert Sherwood's new play that night and then went to the party the Sherwoods were giving. . . . Two of Coward's friends took him aside, and prepared to ask him about the war. . . . "Confidentially, Noel," they began, "tell us—what's really happening over there." . . . Coward placed his finger over his lips, and whispered: "Sh, sh, not a word. I'm very Secret Service."

Noted Singer Tops Revue At Howard

Maxine Sullivan Is Hit in Distinctive Style of Syncopation

A petite but mighty personality, Maxine Sullivan, occupies a headline spot at the Howard Theater this week and, with a new type of subtle swing, easily registers a smash popularity victory over a seasonful of the biggest names in swingdom. Acknowledged as a pioneer in this new and smoother brand of rhythm, he diminutive vocalist lives up to her reputation by ladling out the very tunes that have made her famous: "Annie Laurie," "Loch Lamond," "St. Louis Blues," and that gem of melody, "I Wished Upon a Star."

A competent syncopated aid throughout this sparkling and zestful revue is Claude Hopkins, who guides his boys through their musical paces. "Out of Nowhere," "Blue Skies," and his own, "Yacht Club," proved the hit tunes of their featured group. Tenor Orlando Robeson clicked with "My Prayer."

Other entertainers who ably do their share during this attractively staged revue are Bill Bailey, a speedy tapster of the "Bojangles" type; the Loose Nuts, a trio of zany rhythmeers, and the fun-making combine of Mason and Viga. A special citation goes to the radiumized "Banjoland" routine by the Addison Carey chorines.

On the screen, "Calling Philo Vance," featuring James Stephenson and Margot Stevenson, is a vivid tale of further adventures into the realm of crime by the internationally renowned amateur sleuth.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 3 (INS).—Are Kay Frances and Walter Pidgeon going to be our newest movie team? Well, that is all right with me, for I thought they were swell in "It's a Date." Evidently Universal did too, for Kay gets the top femme lead opposite Walter in that opus of the badmen—"When the Daltons Rode." Can't remember ever seeing the well-groomed Kay in a Western before, but a lot of our glamour girls are going in for the wide open spaces, including Marlene Dietrich, Miriam Hopkins and now la Frances.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Universal is setting great store by "When the Daltons Rode," for in addition to Kay and Walter the cast also includes Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Robert Stack and Andy Devine. I want to say again how glad I am that Kay is making such a splendid comeback. She is wise not to hold out for starring roles, but to accept the best parts in the best pictures that come along.

Ann Sheridan has been handed the best femme role in the present province of Warner Brothers—the dancer in "City For Conquest." This is the character that Bette Davis asked to play, but Jack Warner voted against having Bette and Jimmy Cagney in the same picture. Then came the rumors that Hal Wallis was trying to borrow Alice Faye or Ginger Rogers, but last night, after the sneak preview of "Torrid Zone," Hal decided that the "oomph" girl could play the part. It's the biggest chance Annie has had and is given her partly as a reward for the fact that she never squawks or walks out on a picture, which seems to be a weakness with Warner leading ladies. There's a chance that Cesar Romero, who has danced so much with Annie at Ciro's, may get the part of the male dancer in the picture.

George Stevens, who got himself in the news when he and Katharine Hepburn were stopped by a traffic cop, is negotiating with Columbia studios to produce and direct two pictures. His first will be "New Orleans," by Louis Bromfield, starring Jean Arthur. George left RKO after "Vigil in The Night," 32 days behind schedule, failed to please the "powers that be." The blame for the delay was not entirely George's since members of the cast were sick. George had a very good record at RKO and turned out some of the most successful Ginger Rogers pictures, as well as other money-makers on the same lot. The nephew of our own Ashton Stevens, dramatic critic on the Herald-American, he comes from a theater-minded family.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gloria Dickson's birthday gift to Ralph Murphy, her current boy friend, is a ring; Louise Stanley is planning to make her separation from Addison Randall legal; Joan Crawford returns in a few days, pauses long enough to see "Susan and God" and then takes a boat to Honolulu; Kay Francis and Rudolph Hakin dancing to Emil Coleman's music at Ciro's; Steffi Duna with Gordon Selfridge at the Grace Hayes Lodge; Patricia Morison's mother underwent an appendectomy early yesterday morning; Dolores Del Rio on a diet of eight bottles of cream a day since she left the hospital. That ought to put weight on anybody.

Betty Furness, happily married to Johnny Green, is paying Hollywood a visit and Johnny's good friend, Cesar Romero, is taking her out; Una Wyte, married to Lee Mortimer, of the New York Mirror, opened at the Somerset house and brought out many of the Hollywood crowd; Rudy Vallee walked in at the same time his former heart, Pat Dane, arrived with Ken Murray. Rudy and Pat no speakee; The Leopold Stokowski-Benny Goodman concert was well attended with fans of both maestros loudly applauding. The jitterbug contingent went mad over "Bach Goes to Town" by Alex Templeton and Mary Martin's "May Heart Belongs to Daddy" won thunderous applause. Stokowski's big hand came from Wagner's Debussy's "Moonlight."

The Jules Steins entertained the Ernst Lubitsches, Merle Oberon and Alexander Korda. Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, Ginger Rogers, Hedy Lamarr, Miriam Hopkins and oh, just about the whole town was there; Wallace Beery planning to the high Sierras for the opening of the trout season; George Raft bought a 2-year-old horse and is entering him at Jamaica.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

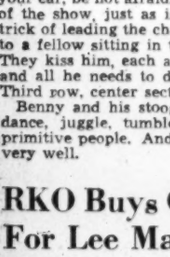
Hollywood, May 3.

When Franchot Tone arrives in town, you're going to see the most co-operative actor around these parts. Like John Garfield, Muni, and Freddie March, who were so anxious to make history in the theater, Tone and all the rest are now only anxious to make history on the screen. Maybe they'll be a little more willing to listen to the producers who pay them those million dollar salaries. Going back to Broadway is all right if you've got a wonderful part, but if you have to carry a bad play and production, your fans stay away in droves.



HOPPER

But a picture can be remade a dozen times, and if you're not good in the first take, they give you fifty. And don't think I'm siding with the producers, either. I'm an actress (I hope), and will fight at the drop of a hat for members of my profession if they are in the right—but the above happens to make sense—or does it?

Just before the Marx Brothers left for Joliet, Ill., where they'll open in "Westward Ho," their next picture, Harpo phoned me that he's opened a bridge club in Beverly Hills under the direction of Lee Langdon, one of the four experts in America. Norma Talmadge, Helen Mencken, Tony Martin—all the bridge bigs in town are attending. If you'll go back a bit, you'll remember there was a tournament whipped up which included Ely Culbertson and Harpo Marx, and at the last minute, Mr. Culbertson withdrew. That will give you a faint idea of how good Harpo is.

And with Rudy Vallee, Errol Flynn, Bob Hope, Ken Murray, Bing Crosby, and Tony Martin backing Don Dickerman in the Pirates' Den here, it looks as though the movies will have another competitor. They say the place will cost $50,000, and they don't care if it doesn't make a cent they can have fun and write it off the income tax.

Also, opposite Earl Carroll's theatre, they are building a huge dance hall, something like the Palomar, which will hold 10,000 people, and will hire the best dance bands in the country. Yes, we're getting ready for the greatest tourists trade ever seen in these parts.

Not only Orson Welles but Jack Barrymore, Monte Woolley, Tommy Mitchell, and Cary Grant all want to play "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Funny that no one's thought of giving it to Alexander Woollcott. If they give it to Orson, they'll save themselves a wad of money, because he can be obscene without being heard. Orson just turned down "The Bat" for $100,000.

Frances Farmer's real heartthrob is a big executive in the United Artist Co., so I guess she'll do more than one picture for that outfit.

Cliff Reid, the genial, rotund producer at RKO was just 24 hours too late in buying Katherine Hepburn and her play "Philadelphia Story" for his studio. And they were prepared to meet Metro's offer, which was $175,000.

But it was Cliff who took her to the Stork Club in satin slacks and mink coat. She didn't want to go, insisted she'd only stay five minutes. But she was having such a good time she ate the following, to stay longer: two orders of liver and bacon, creamed potatoes, and strawberries in rum. Katie's usual supper is taken in bed—a glass of milk, crackers and cheese.

Bimelech Still Odds-On Favorite in Kentucky Derby Today

Plot Against Bimelech . . . The Kentucky Derby Favorite . . . And a 100-1 Shot

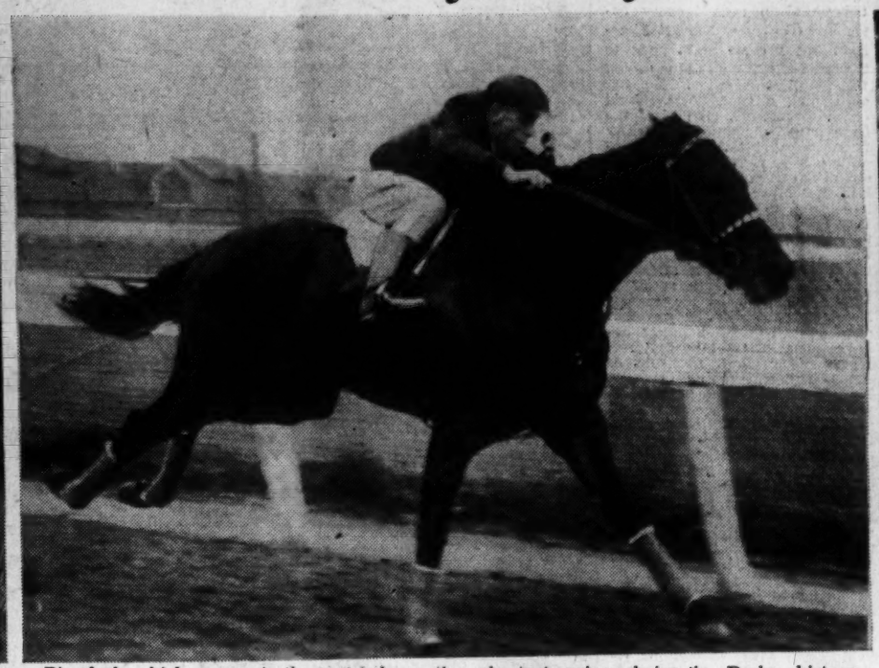
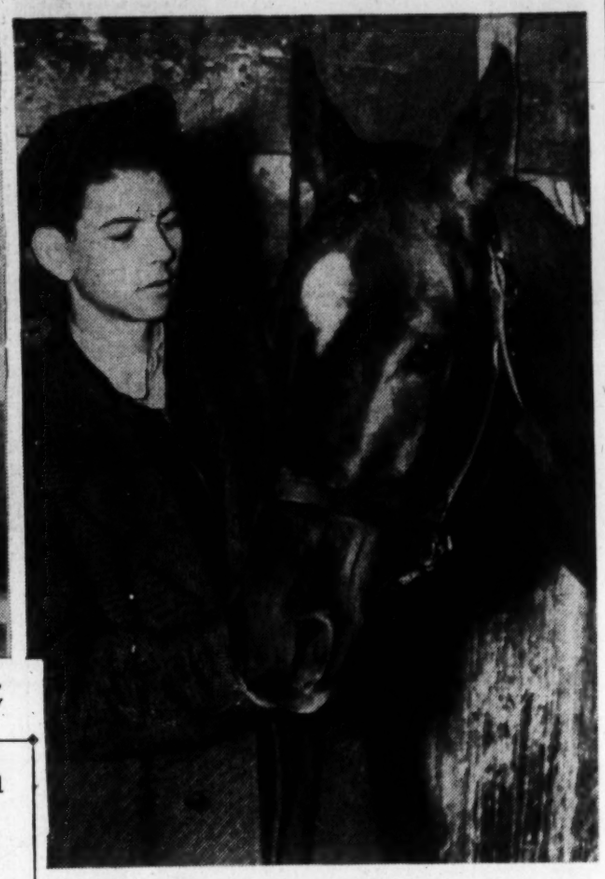
Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

In this pre-Derby huddle Jockey Buddy Haas is telling Dit, one of the chief contenders, how to whip the Derby favorite



Bimelech, which may go to the post today as the shortest price choice in Derby history, stretches his legs over a heavy track in his last pre-race workout with an exercise boy astride. Bimey startled the clockers with his half mile in 0:49 3-5



The big surprise of yesterday at Churchill Downs was the entering of True Star in the Derby. He cost only $550 and is a 100-to-1 shot

All 'Experts' Riding With Col. Bradley

Small Field to Face Barrier; Pictor Carries Maryland Hopes in Classic

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—Kentuckians, right down to the last colonel, are leading with their ace, Bimelech, and are saying, "Beat him and take the pot." Their faith in Col. E. R. Bradley's colt is such that they don't care if you pull trumps out of your sleeve or your pants leg. Deuces are not wild, but the imagination of at least eight owners are and they believe they might take the trick, in this case the largest share of the record $75,000 in added money in tomorrow's sixty-sixth Kentucky Derby.

If we listen to the local "hard boots," and one has to whether or no, the six colts and two geldings named in the overnight entries will chase Bimelech around the mile and a quarter course at Churchill Downs. If one of them is close to the son of Black Toney, they are going to swear he was caught in Bimelech's back wash and was dragged along.

From somewhere last night, probably in that potent last half inch of mint julep, came a rumor that Bimelech had gone lame or developed a cough. This tale did not disturb the colt, but it served to get a half dozen race writers out to the track before the bars opened. They found Bimelech looking out of the half door of his stall at W. L. Brann's Pictor across the way.

Trainer Bill Hurley arrived, laughed at the report, and sent Bimelech out on the track to breeze a half mile in 0:49 3-5 in his final prep for tomorrow's big doings.

In the line-up against Bimelech there are enough "ifs" to indicate that a field of not more than six or seven will face the starter. The "defeated eight," as a local sports writer referred to Bimelech's rivals, are W. L. Brann's Pictor, Maryland's gift to the Derby wars; Arnold Hanger's Dit, winner of the Wood Memorial; C. S. Howard's Mioland, West Coast invader; Joseph E. Widener's Roman, of mud-running fame; Harold S. Clark's Royal Man, second to Pictor in the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace; Charles T. Fisher's Sirocco, Mary-

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Oscar Vitt, who manages the Cleveland Indians, is kindly pointing out to the Yankees the path to their fifth straight pennant. It leads directly through Cleveland, but Vitt hints that he has no intention of prostrating his Indians before the Yankees. "They'll have to beat us," he says.

POVICH

Mr. Vitt has a growing fondness for his ball team, which is natural enough what with his Injuns near the league lead, but he is not dwelling in any fool's paradise. He is nursing no notions that the Yankees are on the point of folding or that they are not a swell ball team. He simply suspects that the Yanks will find the league a bit rockier this year and he sort of likes his own Cleveland team.

"There isn't a push-over club in the league." Vitt was saying. "These teams the Yankees used to murder are better ball clubs this year. The Browns are the most improved club in the league. Any time they get decent pitching they can beat anybody. The same goes for Connie Mack's club. The Yanks have more to contend with. That will help all of us."

Long ago the critics established the Boston Red Sox as the team most likely to succeed in any overthrow of the Yankees, but Vitt doesn't subscribe to that theory. He fancies his Indians as a team at least the equal of Boston. He concedes Boston its superior power, but he snickers at the Red Sox pitching in any comparison with his own.

"I can't figure out that Boston trick of shortening the right-field fence at Fenway Park by 20 feet to accommodate Ted Williams' home runs," said Vitt. "I haven't seen the arrangement yet but from here I'd say Joe Cronin has outsmarted himself. He may be inviting a lot of grief.

"Williams is the only guy on the Boston club who can hit home runs to rightfield. Cramer is the only other left-handed hitter on the team, and he doesn't hit homers. On my club, Jeff Heath and Hal Trosky will be shooting for that new right-field wall, and Cronin has made Fenway Park home run hitters out of five left-handed guys on the Yankees. Every club in the league has a couple of fellows who will be shooting at the fence they fixed up for Williams. It looks kind of unsmart to me."

Vitt pointed out that the season was still very much in its infancy and that his theories could be, conceivably, cock-eyed. "Don't forget," he laughed, "I'm the guy that Walter Johnson once hit in the head with a fast ball. I'll always have an excuse any time my deep thinking goes wrong."

He isn't minimizing the Yankees. He isn't placing much store by the slow start of the Yanks. "When DiMaggio gets back in there, they'll be a different ball club. As it is, the games they've been losing have been low-score affairs. That means the Yankees still have their pitching. But anything we can gain on 'em while DiMaggio is out won't hurt us."

It's an interesting Cleveland Club that Vitt is showing the league this year. It will always be interesting as long as it owns Bob Feller, who is the best pitcher in baseball despite a 1940 record that shows only two victories against two defeats. Feller won't win the 30 games that over-enthusiastic folks predicted for him, because Vitt won't use him in relief roles. But he will lead the league's pitchers again or there ain't no justice.

The current Whattaman of the Cleveland team is the erstwhile rollicking Rollie Hemsley whose reformation continues to startle his big league colleagues. Hemsley who once was taken on tour of the distilleries by a despairing manager who wanted to point out to the catcher that they could make whisky faster than he could drink it, has been a teetotaler for more than a year.

It was barely more than a year ago that a New York newspaperman launched Hemsley on his last drinking spree. When the catcher arrived in Cleveland in no condition to play, representatives of a group called Alcoholics Anonymous called on Hemsley and persuaded him to take the pledge. He did. To the everlasting surprise of Vitt, Hemsley quit drinking.

Cleveland newspapermen reported that fact, but hesitated to interview Hemsley on his reformation. They deemed it too personal a matter. But last week they got the surprise of their lives. Hemsley asked for a press conference and related that he had now been a non-drinker for a year. "I'm telling you fellows this and asking you to print it," he said, "because I want my case to be an example to anybody it will help." Honest, that's what he said.

Angott Wins Lightweight Championship

Beats Day to Take N. B. A. Title in Bout At Louisville

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—Setting up a fearful pace all the way, Sammy Angott left-hooked a decision victory over Davey Day tonight to win what the National Boxing Association has called its version of the world's lightweight 134½. Day 134.

Before a crowd of about 9,000 who turned out for this Kentucky Derby eve brawl, the sweet little slugger from Louisville and Washington, Pa., piled up a decisive margin in the first six rounds and, although tiring down the stretch, kept whacking away to take the sole verdict of Referee-Judge Jack Dempsey.

Dempsey called six rounds in favor of Angott, five for the slim, round-shouldered plodder from Chicago and four even. The Associated Press score card called nine rounds for Angott and six for Day in a fast moving, slashing struggle.

There were no real knockdowns, although Day was half pushed and half punched to a sitting position in the third. He got up in a moment.

This bout, and the resultant N. B. A. recognition of Angott as 135-pound titleholder, came about after the N. B. A. recently took Lou Ambers' crown away because he refused to defend his laurels against Day.

Baer Kayoes Mann in 7th

By the Associated Press

New York, May 3.—Buddy Baer, of Sacramento, Calif., won by a knockout over Nathan Mann, of New Haven, Conn., after 1:36 of the seventh round of their scheduled 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight. Baer weighed 249 and Mann 188.

The end came with dramatic abruptness after six rounds in which the lighter Mann held his own and carried the fight to the apathetic and logey Baer.

A right under the heart put Mann down for a nine count. He arose groggy and bleeding but fought back gamely, but mammoth Baer scented the kill and followed his opponent around the ring pouring in volleys of punishment from all directions.

Again Mann went down for nine and when he arose, his face a gory smear, he dazedly turned his back on Baer and started for his corner. Referee Arthur Donovan walked over to Baer and hoisted his hand as the winner.

Avenging a pair of 1-run, extra-inning losses in its previous interhigh games, Roosevelt High nine jumped on the offerings of Tech's Buddy Webb for 13 safeties and a 6-4 triumph at the Trainers' field yesterday.

For the first time this season big, smiling Eddie Vermillion came into his own when he set the McKinley lads down with five scattered hits and four bases on balls. The 200-pound right-hander, who was credited with both the Riders' early losses, was in danger of losing only twice.

The other half of the scheduled public school doubleheader, between Western and Wilson, was postponed until Monday due to the cold. It will be played at Wilson as announced.

In taking their first series triumph over a team which had beaten Anacostia and Wilson, the Riders looked as good as they were predicted to be. They got at least one man to base in all but three innings. Their tallies were distributed between the third, fifth and seventh innings, in which three, two and one runs were scored, respectively. Tech got a pair of points in the third and single runs in the fifth and sixth.

Hutchinson Stars

Though several players got more hits, Roosevelt's "Red" Hutchinson, filling Hymie Perlo's place behind the plate following the All-High star's shift to the outfield, provided the batting sensation of the day. He pounded a home run into the limitless Tech outfield in the sixth inning, but forgot to touch third base on the round trip. The blow went as a double, Hutchinson's second of the day.

After its three-run splurge in the third, Roosevelt was never headed. Lester Wicklein, converted gridder playing center, was the big gun then, clouting a clean single to left with men on second and third. The first run had been sent home by Vermillion on another single.

In all, it was a big day for Eddie. Four times he got to base, three times on singles and the fourth on a fielder's choice. He handled four fielding chances perfectly, making

Three Homers Help Champions to a 8-4 Victory Over Chicago

By the Associated Press

New York, May 3.—The Yankees came to life with a vengeance today, clubbing blond Edgar Smith and Clint Brown for nine hits—including homers by Red Rolfe, George Selkirk and Charlie Keller—to win the first of a two-game series with the Chicago White Sox by 8-4.

The victory gave young Marvin Breuer, up from their Kansas City farm, his first major league victory of the season. He kept ten Sox hits well scattered until the ninth when Joe Kuhel homered with two on.

Smith lasted for seven innings before retiring in favor of Brown.

New York, May 3 (INS).—Jockey Don Meade was fined $200—the first penalty levied on him since his reinstatement a year ago—for pulling his horse too quickly in front of another entrant in a race at Jamaica today.

Grimes of Indians Injured in Practice

Utility Infielder Rushed to Hospital From Griffith Stadium; Nats Game Called; Injury Hurts Club's Chances

Oscar Grimes, utility infielder, was lost to the Cleveland Indians "for at least a month" when he was struck in the face and painfully injured by a batted ball at Griffith Stadium yesterday. He was removed by ambulance to Garfield Hospital.

Grimes suffered "a number of fractures involving the bones of the face," according to the Washington club physician who was in the park at the time of the accident and treated the player.

The Indians were holding practice following the postponement of the game on account of cold weather when Grimes was hit by a line drive off the bat of Sammy Hale. The utility infielder was standing near second base and was about to turn toward the plate when he was struck on the left side of the face.

He bled profusely, although not losing consciousness, and players of the Cleveland team accompanied him to the hospital. X-ray photographs revealed that his nose was fractured in addition to other facial bones.

"Grimes is painfully injured, although not critically injured," the Nats' physician stated. "His left eye, which had concerned us, is showing much improvement, but his absence from the team will be indefinite."

The injury to their ace utility player is a serious blow to the Cleveland club at this time. Grimes, a 23-year-old native of Minerva, Ohio, who formerly played with Milwaukee, last year substituted capably at every infield position on the team. Currently he has been replacing Hal Trosky at first base.

Grimes was due to play first base yesterday and relinquish the job to Trosky today, but the Indians learned last night that Trosky will not be available. Called to Cleveland by the illness of his young son, Trosky advised Manager Vitt that he would not rejoin the team immediately. An operation performed on the child for the removal of a piece of bacon from his lung saw the boy take a sudden turn for the worse yesterday, Trosky said.

In the absence of both Grimes and Trosky, the Indians' first base job will be turned over today to Outfielder Beau Bell, Vitt announced. Bell played the position in a few games when he was with the Browns and throughout the spring he understudied Trosky in Florida.

Yesterday's postponement curtailed the Nats-Indian series to one game. Bob Feller, originally slated to pitch yesterday, will be withheld

Lou Schaefer Is Very Calm On Derby Eve

By a Staff Correspondent

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—One of the coolest men taking part in this Derby show is Lou Schaefer, the former jockey who trains Pictor, Challedon and others of the Maryland-owned Brann Stable. When the entries were opened early this morning the first 10 minutes brought five of the nine horses. Shortly after 8 a. m. all of the expected entries were accounted for except that of Pictor.

At 9 o'clock, employes of the secretary's office and reporters were watching the track gate but neither Schaefer nor any representative from the barn appeared. At 10 o'clock, there was no yellow slip in the box for son of Challenger II. We scribes began to wonder if something could have gone amiss with the colt.

The clerk, accepting entries, pulled a blank off the pad and filled it in with Pictor's history. A local reporter edged out the door so I followed him. "Where're you going pal?" I asked. He admitted he was going over to the stables to get the low down on Pictor, so I went with him.

But if we were excited about the fact that the entries closed at 10:30 a. m., Schaefer was not. We found him at the entrance to the tack room, talking with Charlie Kurt-

A True Star Victory in Derby Would Climax Amazing Story

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—Martin J. Schmitt, owner of True Star, a 1000-to-1 winter book shot, is banking on the luck of an old Negro stable hand to win the $75,000 added Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs tomorrow.

The old Negro, now dead, borrowed $2 from the Louisville lawyer out at the Downs a couple of years ago and by "a goofy sort of luck" Schmitt now owns a string of eight horses including the Transmute-Cogartown colt.

True Star's entry today in the Derby was a surprise to hardboots, but his owner said he was banking on "luck," confidence in the training ability of his son, Sherman Schmitt, and the riding skill of 19-year-old Douglas West, who will be up on the colt in the Derby.

Schmitt said that several years ago he was at the Downs and loaned $2 to a Negro named Tapp Mapp.

"Tapp said he felt it was the lucky day he had been waiting for, and that he could win us some money," Schmitt related, adding:

"At the end of the third race he called to me and said he had won the daily double of $1,895. Before the day was over he had won $3,700. We bought Odessa Clark for $100, and that was the start of my string.

"I wish Tapp, who worked for me on a salary, could have lived to see us run that $2 up to where we could enter a horse in the Derby."

Schmitt was "praying for mud tomorrow," he explained, because "True Star's chances will increase 25 or 30 points if it rains very much—but mud or fast, we think the horse has a good chance."

Whaddon Chase Captures Spencer Steeplechase at Pimlico

Good Chance Is Nosed Out After Battle

Tar Brush, Mate Of Winner, Takes Place Money; Victor Pays Off $6.90

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, Md., May 3.—C. Mahlon Kline's Whaadon Chase won the featured Jervis Spencer Steeplechase Handicap here today, named in honor of the late chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, by a nose over the Rokeby Stable's Good Chance. Five lengths back, Tarbrush, a stablemate of the winner, earned third money from Broadside King.

Making his first appearance of the season before an estimated crowd of 9,000, Whaadon Chase was rated off the early pace by Jockey W. Passmore and didn't make his move until straightened away in the stretch. He collared Good Chance in the last 70 yards and they fought it out head and head to the wire. Good Chance assumed the lead from the faltering Bay Dean on the final turn and held on with a game effort. Tarbrush forced the early pace of Bay Dean and was tiring at the end. Broadside King, far back in the early running, closed well in the late stages.

The winner was favorite in the betting and paid his backers $6.90. His time for the 2 miles over the wet, spongy course was 4:01 3-5.

Whaadon Chase, defeated by Farndale and Cottesmore in last start in the Manly Steeplechase last fall over this course, earned his revenge as the latter two finished back in the ruck in today's race. The Kline color bearer earned $2,520 for his owner in the first important chase event of the season.

Two Race 'Spies' Arrested Trying To Beat the Game

Louisville, Ky., May 3 (AP).—Two men accused of trying to beat the races were under arrest today.

Police, acting on instructions of Safety Director Sam McMeekin to seek all race-track wire service "bootleggers," arrested the pair in a rooming house overlooking Churchill Downs.

Detectives said the men admitted watching a race through binoculars and then placing bets by long distance telephone, hopeful their call beat the official result to the betting point.

Horses to Watch

At the Post

Dear Al:

If you want to win car fare to Glen Echo and return, then get aboard my Kentucky Derby selection. As far as my pick in tomorrow's horse pageant is concerned, I might as well have "stood in bed" in Washington. I have given myself every opportunity to try and forget Bimelech, but I come right back to the same colt that was in my mind when I left Pimlico. He has everything a good horse should have—the stride, the size, the courage and the soundness. Only poor racing luck, and that includes bad riding or breaking down, can keep Col. Bradley from having another Derby winner. I have tried to bring Pictor up to Bimelech, but not even the fact that I have written a song to the tune of "Roll Out the Barrel" about the Brann colt seems to sway me. The writing seems to be on the wall, as far as this Derby is concerned. I can find only one man who honestly believes Bimelech will be defeated. He is Edgar Horn, president of the Maryland racing writers. He says that Bimelech will be running his third race in a short period and that he believes Bimelech may be too fine and may tail off tomorrow. But Horn could be letting his love for Maryland and his friendship for Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brann sway him to Pictor. However, he contends that Pictor is untried at a distance over a fast track. He is right on that angle. Pictor's only race of more than 6 furlongs was in deep mud in the Chesapeake. He points to the fact that in the mud, Pictor turned back three bold challenges, then went on to hold Royal Man, one of his rivals tomorrow, safe in the stretch run. He is right on that score, too. Some of his other arguments are that Pictor is well trained and that he has the best jockey in America in Georgie Woolf. Well, I was high on Chatledon last year in the Derby and low on him in the Preakness, so maybe Horn has something there. At any rate, I'm strictly Bimelech. I'll take Pictor for second, then Roman, and, just to be real wrong, I'll say Gallahdion. Dit, Mioland, Royal Man, Sirocco and True Star will be in the order named.

BILL.

Confucius went for two berries yesterday, but thinks that things are looking brighter for today. He say $2 of his 32 aces on TRYSTATE.

Selections at Pimlico

First race. Hand and Glove raced well with better grade juveniles last year and is reported to be ready for his seasonal bow. Last Passage is a doubtful starter, but rates a good chance off his second to Flying Waters at Bowie. Bowling Broke receives a high figure, but may not need this race.

Second race. Phone Dijon is superior mud horse and the competition here is none too keen. Placed last on the eligible list, he may not get in. Abnormal has the early foot to go to the top and should stick it out for second money. Joe Smokey beat a cheap field at Havre in his last and merits a chance.

Third race. Rockmayne has spent the major portion of his career racing at the hunt meets, but is reported to be very fast. The contention in this claiming event does not call for much. Redlander needed his recent race over this course and should show improvement. Baffler has a chance if fit.

Fourth race. Shalako is a superior mud performer and drops way down after racing behind Overnight. He whipped platers of this sort at Havre. Palkin needed his last and appears to be the most serious contender. Square Play has raced well this spring and might be a factor.

Fifth race. Helena disappointed connections in her last race, but in two previous starts over muddy tracks, finished second to Speed to Spare and General Mowlee. She receives top figure on an off track. Drudgery also likes mud, and has a good chance, despite a recent poor race. Night Tide is in form and dangerous.

Sixth race. Fairy Chant was beaten a nose by True Call in her first start here since Santa Anita, running within a second of the track record. She is a superior mudder and should reverse the decision on her recent victory. Now What was the champion filly last year, but stopped badly in a sprint this week.

Seventh race. Count Tetrarch just missed when beaten a head by Connie Plaut under similar conditions on Thursday. He meets an inferior field today and should win. Barbed Retort raced well at Havre and figures much the best of the others. Pretty Night drew heavy support in his last and might be dangerous.

Eighth race. Autumnquest meets a field she can best in the nightcap. Over her head in her last, she ran a good second to Room Service at Havre. Dinamita has early foot, and, liking the mud, may last for runner-up position. Braving Danger has been inconsistent in late races.

Braving Danger has been inconsistent in late races.

Black Sweep Favored in 19th Virginia Gold Cup Race Today

Or Else, Sir Rome Also Well Thought of in Warrenton Classic

By the Associated Press

Warrenton, Va., May 3.—Black Sweep, big black gelding from the stables of Mrs. Frank Gould, New York City, was established as a slight favorite tonight as nine of the East's foremost steeplechasers awaited tomorrow's nineteenth renewal of the Virginia Gold Cup race.

Other heavily backed entries included Or Else, owned by William F. Cochran, of Baltimore, Gold Cup winner in 1939, and Sir Rome, local horse owned by Mrs. Amory S. Carhart.

Mrs. Gould has furnished two winners in this Old Dominion past-and-rail classic and needs one more victory to retire the trophy valued at $1,500.

A crowd of 15,000 persons is expected to gather at the Broadview estate for the four-event program starting at 3 p. m.

A hurdle race for a mile and a half will open the card with the 4-mile Gold Cup to be staged next. The Virginia National, 2½ miles over brush and carrying a purse of $1,500, will be the third event and another hurdle race will top off the program.

A total of 40 jumpers were quartered in the Broadview Barns tonight. Other entries in the Gold Cup feature are Houseman, owned by Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, of Middleburg; Little Dutchess, Mrs. Robert G. Winmill, Warrenton; Postman Home, Mrs. Stewart Spilman, The Plains; Gulfeland, Lewis M. Allen, Winchester; Tiger Lane, Raymond Guest, Front Royal, and Hold Forth, a second entry by Mrs. Gould.

Prominent Virginia National entries are Our Manager, owned by L. W. Robinson, jr., Pittsburgh, and Telemark, owned by R. V. N. Gambrill, Peapack, N. J. Our Manager, winner in 1939, will face a strong field of 11.

The Fauquier Plate, for maidens, has 17 starters, including such strong contenders as Sir Koster, owned by Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Durham, N. C., and Goodworth, owned by Joseph Richards, jr., of Washington, D. C.

Nine horses are slated to run in the closing $500 hurdle event. Favored are Yamasee, entered by Mrs. Reginald Sinclaire, Larkspur, Colo.; Sea Ted, entered by Paul Melon's Rokeby Stables

Georgetown Scores Run in Eighth to Beat Fordham, 5 to 4

Hoyas Score 7th Victory; Defeat Bowe

Pitcher's Brilliant Streak Is Halted by D. C. Nine at N. Y.; Koshlap's Run Wins

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 3.—Gene Bowe's perfect pitching record and Fordham's budding winning streak were wrecked on Rose Hill today by a Georgetown team which refused to be awed either by their surroundings or the accomplishments off their foemen. The hustling Hoyas won, 5 to 4, and thus avenged their only defeat of the season suffered at the hands of Bowe and Fordham in Washington.

It was the Ram right-hander's first setback in five games and Fordham's second in nine, not taking into account one tie. Continuing the statistical trend, the Georgetown triumph was its seventh in eight starts, its first over the Maroon in three years, and widened the Hoya margin in the old series, 14 to 12. With their marked advantage in scoring power the Hoyas should have had a more comfortable margin of victory, but as it turned out they needed the collaboration of the shaky Fordham defense to put over the winning run in the eighth.

John Schmitt, the Georgetown lead-off man who produced three hits, drew a walk and sacrificed in five appearances at the plate, started Bowe's downfall by lifting a towering wind-blown fly to left-field that fell among numerous Fordhams for a double.

There was great activity in the fifth when Georgetown made two runs on two singles, a sacrifice, a walk and a hit batsman and would have done even more damage had not Jules Koshlap wandered so far off second that he was an easy victim of Krywicki's snap throw to Murphy. Fordham responded to this outburst with one of its own, combing singles by Gomez, McGurk, Groh and Dillon with Principe's line double to center for three runs before Wixted steadied and retired the next two batters on strikes.

Georgetown won the game in the eighth when Koshlap doubled down the rightfield foul line and moved up on McFadden's bunt.

Posedel Hits, Pitches Bees To Victory

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 3.— Bill Posedel's hurling and hitting gave Boston's Bees their second victory of the year today, a 4-to-2 triumph over St. Louis' faltering Cardinals.

The veteran righthander not only held the Cards to seven scattered hits, but his double in the sixth inning started the Bees on a three-run rally, the clincher of the game.

For a time it looked like lean Lon Warneke would be the first Cardinal to go the route this season, but five hits off him in that fatal sixth was curtains. Jack Russell and Bob Bowman finished the game.

Most of the thrills of the contest were packed in that sixth inning. Three of the Bees stole bases, Buddy Hassett scored and Tony Cuccinello reached second on a double steal, and Les Scarsella later pilfered second.

Clark Griffith announced yesterday that due to the postponement of the ladies' day game, he has designated Monday's game against the St. Louis Browns as a ladies' day game.

Crew Racing Heads Navy's Slate Today

Varied Program Is Scheduled for Naval Base This Afternoon

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, May 3.—Topped by a three-race rowing regatta with crew of Cornell University, the Navy Midshipmen will engage in a big program of athletic competition here tomorrow. Varsity, jayvee and freshmen eights will swing to their blades over a course of 1¾ miles. The rival crews put in the finishing touches to their work on the waters of the Severn this afternoon. But the workouts were under rather unfavorable conditions owing to a fairly brisk down-course breeze that made the water choppy.

The races are scheduled to get under way at 3 o'clock, water conditions permitting, beginning with the freshmen brush, and the varsity event as the nightcap.

Other outstanding contests on tomorrow's card are baseball, with the strong team of Duke University which recently shut out the Army nine, 10 to 0; a double-header track meet with varsity and freshmen teams of University of North Carolina; lacrosse with Syracuse University; tennis with Penn State College, and an outdoor rifle match with the Philadelphia Marines. The varsity golf team will tee off with University of Virginia. Minor events on the program are baseball between the "B" squad and St. Elizabeth's A. C. of Baltimore; tennis, plebe vs. Blue Ridge College freshmen; golf, plebes, vs. George Washington freshmen; baseball, plebes vs. Forest Park High, of Baltimore, and lacrosse, plebes vs. Severn School.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, May 3.—One of the riddles of the turf for 20 years has been the exact reson why Sam Riddle, owner of Man o' War, chose not to enter him in the Kentucky Derby.

The omission took something from Man o' War—not merit certainly, because that arm of Providence that has to do with horses lavished merit in Big Red's silken hide. But the great champion lost the extra glint of eternal fame that should have been his. Great horses are meant to win great races. This was our greatest horse, but he never had a chance to win what is our best known—and thus our greatest—race.

CONSIDINE

It couldn't have been the dough. Riddle had been a rich man for several years before that and it would have cost him only $25 to have nominated Man o' War for the 1920 Derby at the end of 1919. It couldn't have been lack of confidence, because Man o' War as a 2-year-old in 1919 won nine of the ten races in which he was entered and only inexcusable handling had kept him from winning the tenth.

It was said that the Derby of that era was a cheap race. Yet it was worth $30,375 to its winner, Paul Jones, the year Man o' War might have run in it. Big Red won $23,000 a week earlier by winning the Preakness. And Riddle never was one to scoff at a buck.

Recently, a celebrated horseyard habitue told us what he says is the real reason for Riddle's action. He said at the time Riddle had to make the decision he had not been in the dough very long. He said Riddle was beginning to mingle more and more with the inner circle of Philadelphia society, and that several of the social arbiters who stood between him and complete acceptance into that frosty clique, were interested in the Pimlico track, scene of the Preakness.

Our informant says that they went to work on Sam in such a way as to convince him to turn over exclusively to Pimlico, and the Preakness, the most negotiable piece of horseflesh America ever knew. They pointed out to him that the Preakness was more of a gentleman's race than the Derby, because it paid more heed to the breeding angle. For instance, the Derby lets geldings run; the Preakness bars them because they have no future stud value. They pointed out, too, our friend says, that Louisville was beginning to make its Derby week-end into a bawdy, lusty mardi gras, while stately old Baltimore offered a more seemly backdrop to the running of a great champion.

Man o' War had eight competitors in that 1920 Preakness including the only thing that ever finished in front of him—H. P. Whitney's Upset. The field was jittery at the post.

He was off fourth, but overtook his leaders in a few massive leaps. By the time he spun into the far turn he was three lengths to the good and simply loping, with Upset and the others staggering behind him. He looked as if he were only playing down the stretch, his ears pricking to the sounds of the overflowing crowd of 40,000 which had made him a 4-5 favorite.

He made the Preakness. But to do it he had to forfeit his chances to win the gaudy, gracious, utterly irrestible American Institution, the Derby

W.-L. Bows To Colonials In Wild Game

George Washington Scores Second Time Over Generals

Timely hitting plus an adequate stint of relief pitching by big Jack Redinger yesterday fetched George Washington's nine its second victory of the season over Washington and Lee, 10 to 9, in a wild game on the East Elipse.

Outhit, 13 to 9, by the Generals, who were dropping their second game in as many days to a local team, the Colonials made the most of their blows—all singles—especially in the second when they clinched the decision with an eight-run outburst.

Redinger, former Roosevelt High star, took up the mound burden for G. W. with none out in the fifth inning after the Lexington invaders had scored two runs and had the bases loaded off Toby Bright. He forced one runner at the plate, escaped the bad situation with loss of only two runs and continued on to pitch acceptably although W. and L. nicked him for there runs in the seventh to pull up to 9 to 10.

G. W. Goes Into Lead

By the second-inning rally which was fashioned from four singles, three walks and a hit batsman, as 12 players went to the plate, George Washington established itself in an 8-to-1 lead. The Generals reduced that advantage to 8 to 2 by scoring once in the third, but the Colonials came back in the fourth with 2 runs which proved sufficient.

Dick Smith, first of three right-handed pitchers used by Washington and Lee, which was beaten, 13 to 8, Wednesday by Maryland, was charged with the defeat, the Generals' tenth in 15 games this season.

A 12-run spree in the eighth inning, the largest staged by a scholastic nine here this year, overcame Devitt Prep's 7-5 lead and gave Anacostia High a 17-7 victory yesterday at the Indians' diamond.

Six singles, a double by Ernie Schaffer, three bases on balls and four Devitt errors—all by Archie Panago—were mixed in the Indians' spectacular inning. The victory was Anacostia's second in five games, one tie being included in the record.

Gene Nunnally hurled the full nine innings for the victors.

Mrs. Haggin Perry's Bo Bend Wins Stuyvesant Championship

Warrenton, Va., May 3.—Bo Bend, smooth-moving champion 4-year-old owned by Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, of Cobham, Va., won the hunter championship of the Stuyvesant Horse Show over a topflight field of Virginia horses at the Stuyvesant School, near here, today.

Bo Bend won two blue ribbons during the afternoon and worked well in the championship class, shown under saddle, to defeat Patricia Anne Benoit's Sport Marvel, who won his second reserve championship in two days. His other triumph came yesterday at the Warrenton Country School's horse show, when young Miss Benoit showed the big brown gelding for the first time.

A big crowd of Old Dominion horse lovers turned out to see the well-balanced card of 18 hunter, jumper and horsemanship classes. In the featured knockdown-and-out event, fences went from 4 feet to 5 feet 3 inches as Howard Butz' Hobo, with Malvern Bell up, finally took the blue. Hobo, who has been "permanently retired" from the show ring enough times to rate a pension, won his ribbon after Alex Calvert's Momma apparently went clean over the 5-foot fences, but was later declared to have changed the height of one of the top bars, thus scoring a knockdown. In the jump-off that followed, Hobo won over Alexander Rives on Red Port, with Calvert's mare third.

Nation's Turf Writers 'Sold' On Bimelech in Derby Today

Experts Agree That 'Bimmie' Can't Miss and That Dit Will Beat Out Pictor for Place

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—The Nation's leading turf writers who have been known to be wrong before, sat down today to study tomorrow's Kentucky Derby and came up with the discovery that favored Bimelech couldn't miss and that Arnold Hanger's Dit would nose out Pictor for second place.

Only two of the "experts" in the annual Associated Press poll picked horses other than Col. E. R. Bradley's odds-on choice as the winner of the sixty-sixth running of the Churchill Downs classic.

One of these, Edgar Horne, of Turf and Sports Digest, chose Pictor, W. L. Brann's mud-runner, to top Bimmie. Pictor is Maryland-bred and Edgar is a Marylander from 'way back. The other "beat Bimmie" selector was Ted Husing, of Columbia Broadcasting Co., who hopped on Dit to win and Harold A. Clark's Royal Man to place. He couldn't see Bimmie for better than show.

Ten picked Dit for second, ten more for third and eight for fourth. On a point basis of 3-2-1 for second, third and fourth, the winner of the Wood Memorial compiled 58 points for second honors in the voting. Pictor, with seven second-place selections, was third with 41 points; Joseph E. Widener's Roman was fourth with 35 and the California "glamour boy," Charles S. Howard's Mioland, was fifth with 29.

Buck Weaver, Louisville Times—Nothing can touch Bimmie. Pictor, Mioland and Dit will chase him home that way.

Cy Peterman, Philadelphia Inquirer—Dit, Pictor and Royal Man to follow Bimlech in.

George Krehbiel, Detroit News—You can't pick against Bimelech to win. Dit and Roman should chase him in and Charlie Fisher's Sirocco can surprise for fourth place.

Hezzy Dent, Louisville Courier-Journal—Pictor, Dit and Mioland back of Bimmie.

Paul Lowry, Los Angeles Times—Bimelech to win, of course. Pictor, Dit and our California, Mioland, in back of him.

Curtis Seeks To Eliminate $7 Preferred

Recapitalization Plan Proposes Debentures, Common as Substitutes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Philadelphia, May 3.—A recapitalization plan, offering owners of present preferred stock an opportunity to exchange for new preferred, common and debentures, was proposed to stockholders of the Curtis Publishing Co. today.

Holders of present $7 dividend preferred would be offered an opportunity under the plan to exchange each share for $10 principal amount 15-year 3 per cent debentures, two and a half shares of common and one share of a new $4 prior preferred stock, on which $3 annual dividend will be cumulative and $1 will be payable and cumulative to the extent earned. This stock also will have equal voting rights with the common.

The plan would reduce the annual dividend requirements ahead of the common from $5,056,940 on the present $7 preferred to $216,726 annual interest on the debentures, $2,889,680 total on the prior preferred and $250,000 for sinking fund purposes (capital charge), or a total of $3,358,406 annually.

Plan Is Flexible

The preferred stockholders who make the exchange are in line for $4 annual dividends, 3 per cent interest on the $10 debentures and an equity position through common stock; the common stockholders are brought in a position to share in increased earnings, and the company's requirements for interest, sinking fund, and full preferred dividends are reduced at least $1,700,534 annually with existing dividend accumulations eliminated. The plan is flexible so that dividend charges are reduced an additional $722,420 or from $4 to $3 a share if the full amount is not earned.

A special meeting of stockholders has been called for July 2 in Philadelphia to vote on the proposal. Stockholders of record at the close April 30 are entitled to vote. Consent of two-thirds of the holders of the preferred and a majority of the common is required.

Stock held directly or indirectly by the company amounting to 177,580 shares of preferred and 66,959 of common is not entitled to vote and will be canceled if the recapitalization becomes effective. If all present preferred is exchange there will be outstanding $7,224,200 in 15-year 3 per cent debentures, 722,420 shares of prior preferred and 3,539,091 of common.

Stated Capital to Be Cut

To provide for issuance of the debentures present stated capital of $30,000,000 will be re-stated at $22,775,800 with $7,224,200 transferred to surplus against which the debentures will be charged. Authorization would be provided for issuance of funded debt up to 20 per cent of combined capital, surplus and earned surplus, provided the total funded debt does not exceed $7,224,200 while any of the debentures are outstanding.

The debentures are unsecured obligations of the company, callable after January 1, 1941, and provision is made for a sinking fund of $250,000 a year for retirement. The prior preferred will have a liquidation value of $65 a share and be callable at $75. There will be no change in present preferred not exchanged. There will be no change in terms of the common. Scrip for the half shares will be issued, exchangeable in combination for whole shares within five years.

Average earnings for the last three years were $2,514,062. The average for the last seven years was $3,736,158. The preferred dividend was first passed in 1932. Business on the books at present is ahead of a year ago, the company reported. Net earnings for the first quarter this year were $665,328 compared with $382,088 for the like quarter a year ago. The company paid a dividend of $1 on April 1 and has declared a dividend of $1 payable July 1 to stock of record May 31.

Economic War Gains Offset Allied Losses

Nazi Success in North May Drive Stalin Closer to England

New York, May 3.—The Allies had to look to the economic battle front this week to console themselves for military setbacks in Norway, according to cable dispatches to Business Week today. The Balkan sector displayed increasing evidence that the pound sterling drive was biting into supplies counted on by the Reich.

Britain's strategy of outbuying Berlin on this flank showed up in trade figures from Rumania and Yugoslavia. Moreover, the German position had deteriorated in some commodities because of her inability to meet export obligations—proof that the war effort was taking more than original estimates of Reich production and lending weight to Allied view that the blockade forced the Nazis to abandon the waiting game.

As the Nazis consolidated their grip on Norway, the Moscow pendulum indicated the start of a swing back toward the Allies. Stalin's task is to prevent either belligerent from becoming too powerful. Hence the Soviet Ambassador to London announced Russia would make certain concessions to conclude a new trade agreement with Britain. Russia recognizes Britain's right to guard against Soviet-imported war materials reaching Germany, but refuses to accept restrictions on supplies of Russian origin.

Germany's Problems

Domestic business news in the Reich is swept aside by the impact of economic developments on the northern and southern flanks. Isolated from western Europe and overseas markets, the Scandinavian sector faces three main objectives:

Development of Norway's, Sweden's and Denmark's own resources on the German autarchic plan. Most acute is a substitute for Denmark's overseas supplies of corn and oilcake for stock feeding; intensification of trade among countries in the Reich economic bloc.

Berlin is likely to benefit by the extensive hoarding of necessary materials practiced by the Scandinavian countries since the conflict started. They sacrificed foreign exchange reserves to import oversea supplies which would keep their farms and industries going. The Norwegian and Danish stocks now are available for German use.

Viennese reports note the inroads of Britain's determination to outbuy Germany on her Balkan flank. The importance of this front has been magnified since the Scandinavian invasion put the blockade lock on ports that formerly served as leakage points for Germany.

Britain Gains in Rumania

Although in March, this year, Germany still held first place in Rumanian exports, Britain was a close second. British raids are further evident in Turkish takings representing Rumanian oil, livestock, timber sold to Turkey for British account. Since the war broke, Britain has trebled her purchases of Yugoslav hemp, while German buying has been cut in half.

Renewal of Russian-Yugoslavian trade relations is expected as a result of conferences which began late last week when the newly arrived Belgrade economic delegation conferred with Mikoyan, commissar for foreign trade.

Costs of Peace and War

American taxpayers will pay more to operate this Government on its peacetime basis during the 1941 fiscal year than the Britisher must pay to support his government on a wartime footing during the same period, says the National Association of Manufacturers.

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer has announced that the national government of Great Britain (including England, Scotland, Wales and northern Ireland) will spend 2 billion 667 million pounds during the fiscal year.

At the current exchange rate this totals just a little over 10 billion dollars.

In the United States the Federal Government's spending program for the year beginning July 1 calls for expenditure of about 9⅔ billion dollars. State and local governments will spend about 9 billion 800 million more, bringing the total cost to the taxpayers to over 19 billion dollars.

Steels, War Babies Lead Broad Rally In Final Hours, While Bonds Tumble On British Reverses in Scandinavia

New York, May 3.—Stocks were weak this morning on general selling which apparently reflected disappointment over the Allied showing in Norway and tension over the Mediterranean situation.

Steadier tendencies prevailed in the afternoon when a broad rally got under way with steels and other war stocks, pulp and paper shares and a few other special issues as leaders. Although there were more declines than gains, the composite for the 100 stocks was 0.4 point higher. Volume was 1,070,750 shares.

Market Belies Peace Aim

Some commentators thought that impetus for the come back in stocks could be traced to President Roosevelt's indication that the United States is working to maintain calm in Italy and the Far East. The action of the market, however, belied this view.

Most of the volume and the largest gains of the day were in shares of companies which could benefit substantially by continuance or extension of the war. Steels were an outstanding example, Bethlehem making a new high for the year at 86 after being under 82. It closed at 84½ for a net gain of 1¼ and with United States common and Republic appeared in the most active list of the day.

International Paper was the leader on a 44,100-share turnover at a net advance of ¾ point. Union Bag was also active, but turned in a fractional decline.

American Car & Foundry issues perked up on news that the company has received shell orders, and Crucible Steel added more than a point. American Hawaiian Steamship recorded a new high and Douglas Aircraft ended with a ¾-point rise.

The motor division ended with a small loss due largely to a sell-off in Chrysler. General Motors added half a point. Packard was shaded fractionally.

Baldwin Locomotive sparked the rail equipments, which were a good second to the steels on the up side. Oil shares were steady, including Tide Water Associated and Standard of New Jersey. Mines and metals were spotty, Patino marking a sharp gain and International Nickel a trifle higher. Norfolk & Western established a new top at 224½, up 3½.

Rubber shares were lower, coinciding with a bulge in rubber futures on fears that spread of war in the Mediterranean may cause a shortage of ships. U. S. Rubber common was off 1⅞, a new low.

Foreign Bonds Tumble

Most foreign dollar bonds tumbled sharply in the listed market today, owing to the thickening atmosphere in Europe. Defeat of the Allies in Norway lowered Norwegian dollar bonds by 4 to 11 points. Danish bonds were marked lower. Italian issues fell 2 to 4 points. The German group moved fractionally lower, while Canadian and Australian bonds likewise eased. Only a few of the Latin-Americans showed any stability.

The listed market otherwise was quiet, turnover amounting to $6,150,000. United States Treasury securities were marked lower by small fractions. Some best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds also improved by small fractions.

A break-down of the receipts from the huge corporation's subsidiaries, on file today at the New York Stock Exchange after being reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission, showed the southern unit contributed $5,883,043 out of $39,536,312 in cash dividends received by the parent company in 1939.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., largest steel making unit in the world, showed a loss of $18,888,206. American Steel & Wire Co., producer of rolled products and alloy steels, in which competition is sharp, turned in a loss of $4,537,820.

Foreign Markets

London, May 3 (AP).—Lively demand for British government bonds stopped a morning hesitancy in the securities market today. Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement on Norwegian war operations acted as a deterrent to demand at the outset, but investment buying of gilt-edged issues spread to other sections. In the foreign bond market Far Eastern loans were under pressure. Industrials closed narrowly irregular. Kaffirs attracted local support, but Australian golds were influenced by taxation uncertainties. Most oils held steady.

Paris—Bourse prices steadily gained forward momentum today, especially domestic industrials. Demand was influenced by latest foreign exchange regulations, which led to switching from foreign to domestic equities. Rentes closed 18 centimes lower to 70 higher.

Amsterdam—Domestic securities were freely offered with oils, rubbers and sugars under pressure. American issues fluctuated narrowly with steels and automobile shares better. Bonds closed lower with the exception of Japanese.

Liverpool — Cotton futures cancelled early declines today to end 3 to 5 points up. Strength in Egyptian cotton spurred buying.

Chicago, May 3.—Wheat prices rose 2 cents after an early fractional slump today and closed 1¾-1⅞ higher than yesterday with May at $1.06⅝-$1.06¾ and July $1.05⅞-1.06.

The rally was due to buying based largely on the critical European situation, particularly in the Mediterranean, strength in securities and a revival of inflation gossip.

Corn closed ⅝-1⅛ higher than yesterday, May, 65⅜; July, 66¼-66⅜. Oats, ¼-⅞ up. Soy beans, ⅝-1 up. Rye, 1-1¼ higher and lard 3-10 higher.

Exchange Markets

New York, May 3 (AP).—Sterling continued to slide down today in the foreign money market. The Swiss franc improved a bit, while the guilder was unaltered. Late rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Auto Output Below 100,000

Detroit, May 3 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports today estimated the week's output of the motorcar factories at 99,305 units, compared with 101,405 last week and with 71,420 this week a year ago.

The trade publication said that although this week's volume dropped below 100,000 units for the first time since mid-February, "the outlook for production continues steady," and predicted 420,000 vehicles would be assembled during May.

$2,114,921,225 Left For U.S. Borrowing

The Treasury said yesterday it had $2,114,921,225 of its $45,000,000,000 borrowing power left on April 30. A monthly analysis of the debt showed that although the face amount of debt outstanding on April 30 was $42,657,771,537, allowances for future values of savings bonds boosted the charges against the debt limit to $42,885,078,775.

Rock Island Trustees Seek Refunding Issue

Trustees of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $4,500,000 of 2¼ per cent certificates of indebtedness to replace an equal amount of outstanding 3 per cent certificates.

The trustees said holders of the 3 per cent certificates had agreed to a reduction in the interest rate on condition that the railroad waive an option to redeem the certificates prior to maturity, June 1, 1941.

$114,449,664 In New Issues During Week

By the Associated Press

New York, May 3.—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday totaled $114,449,664, the largest volume in nine weeks, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

The week's issues included the biggest public rail financing in 13 years, an offering of $81,602,000 Union Pacific 3½ per cent refunding bonds.

The demand for new money was small, however, accounting for only 15 per cent of the total. The remainder represented refunding of existing obligations.

Comparisons follow:

Steel Advance Is Seen as Meaning End of Decline

New York, May 3.—This week's advance in the steel operating rate from 60% to 61.8% of capacity is further corroboration that the decline has ended, says Business Week today. This modest upturn in the steel rate may be the signal of a short-term upturn in general business, though it is still too early to come to very positive conclusions.

In fact, it is possible that a current advance in steel output may be at the expense of business later on this year; that steel orders which were booked last week and the first two days of this week may represent business from June, July, and August. Thus the advance in operations is not to be accepted at its face value yet.

Cotton Drops 4 to 10 Points, Closing at Lows

New York, May 3 (AP).—Foreign news, Washington political developments and crop reports ganged up on the cotton futures market today and depressed prices 4 to 10 points. Foreign offerings put prices back at the start and despite a short-lived rally the list deaded down to close at the day's lows.

Most effective clamp on sbpeculative buying, in the opinion of many brokers, was impasse in a joint House-Senate committee considering the appropriation bill of the Department of Agriculture.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures advanced 9 to 14 points today in the liveliest trade of the week. A more disturbing view of war news and strength of related markets provided buying incentives. Sales totaled 102 lots: May, *6.97; July, *7.00; September, *7.07; October, *7.07; December, *7.10. (*Bid.) Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5⅝ to 6 cents a pound in the Southeast, 5¾ to 5⅞ in the Valley and 5½ to 5⅝ in Texas.

U. Md. Host to Va. Trackmen

Rathbuns, Fuller Head Cavaliers

Terps Hold 23d Annual Field Day Today; Baseball Game Also Listed

Norman and Kenneth Rathbun, a brother act from Baltimore, will be cast in iron-man roles today when the Virginia track team hooks up with Maryland in the feature of the Terps' twenty-third annual Field Day at College Park.

Norman is entered in five events—the 100, high hurdles, javelin, broad jump and discus, while Kenneth is scheduled to compete in three—the pole vault, high jump and broad jump.

The Rathbuns together with Frank Fuller, star hurdler, are expected to score the bulk of the Cavaliers' points as they engage the Terrapin iron-man squad which romped away with three major titles in the Penn Relays.

The Virginia-Maryland engagement is one of three varsity events which will share attention today with the annual interscholastic meet bringing out more than 500 schoolboy athletes from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District.

Program Opens at 1 p. m.

The varsity program opens at 1 p. m. with tennis with George Washington. The interscholastic and varsity track meets will start at 1:30 and run concurrently. Final contest of the day will be a conference baseball game with William and Mary.

Tennis between Maryland frosh and McKinley Tech High School is scheduled for 10 a. m.

Washington-Lee High, of Ballston, Va., will be on hand to defend its open scholastic title, and Bel Air High will return to seek the county team crown for the second straight year.

Maryland's running strength against Virginia's power in the field—that's the way the varsity track meet shapes up. The Terps figure to just about sweep the races, from the 100 to the 2 miles, but nevertheless the Cavaliers expect to win the meet by counting heavily in the hurdles, broad and high jumps, javelin, discus and shot put. In none of these events does Maryland have a strong contender.

47 Schools in Meet

Forty-seven schools, including seven from the District, have entered teams in the interscholastic meet, with Newport News, Va., and Seton Hall Prep, of Orange, N. J., expected to fight it out for the open title with Washington-Lee, Central, Tech, Wilson, Roosevelt, Eastern, Devitt and Gonzaga are the Washington schools entered.

Bel Air's supremacy in the Maryland county section of the meet will be threatened by no less than a dozen rivals, prominently Hyattsville, Hagerstown, Frederick, Towson, Catonsville and Fort Hill.

Schaefer Calm As Derby Nears

singer, like himself a former jockey turned trainer. Schaefer just smiled when we tried to hurry him.

Pictor was being cooled out under the stable shed. When the colt was led around the next time, Schaefer gave him a lump of sugar and a few pats under the chest. He gave some instructions to the help, poured a cup of coffee, drank it and then started for the secretary's office.

How can a young man be so cool with a Kentucky Derby at stake? I almost shook myself out of the Charles Town press box one day because I had my Dunlad going in the seventh race.

DERBY NOTES—Bimelech was the first horse entered . . . And the last draw . . . Pictor, last to enter, drew the outside post position . . . True Star, the 1,000 to 1, was the first slip to come out of the box . . . Only one Derby trainer was present when the positions were drawn . . . He was Tom Smith, conditioner of Mioland . . . He shook up the pals for the draw, and C. R. Valentine, an obscure trainer, pulled the slips out of the box . . . Schaefer and Moody Jolly, who has charge of Royal Man, were the only trainers to turn in their own entries . . . Agents put in the others . . . Bimelech's slip went in the box at 7:55 from the hands of Mose Cossman, betting agent for Bradley for more than 40 years . . . Mose, a tiny man with a large nose, performed the same ceremony for Bradley's other Derby winners . . . Asked if he was jittery, he replied, "I have THE horse. Those other fellows should do the shaking" . . . Trainers and breeders figure in the money in this year's Derby for the first time . . . Winning trainer gets $3,000 . . . The race will be worth $60,650 if nine start . . . Take off $500 for each scratch . . . 26 new bars, serving only mint juleps, have been erected . . . One of the barmaids wore a fur coat today . . . Speaking of mint juleps, there was an ad for whisky in a local paper today . . . It was printed in green ink, flavored with mint, and actually smelled of the plant.—HAIGHT.

Sally Whipple, Mrs. Martin Upset Victors in Team Play

Washington's No. 1 Pair Beats Mrs. Davy And Godfrey Although Team Loses Match

Sally Whipple, Washington Golf and Country Club's youthful champion, teamed with Mrs. Wilda Martin yesterday to surprise Congressional's top team of Mrs. Myron Davy and Mrs. Florence Godfrey in the feature of the Women's team matches at Chevy Chase. Congressional won the match, 9-3, but in the first foursome the three points were divided 1½ each.

Manor took the lead in the team competition with a 12-to-0 shutout of Columbia, Mrs. Pray's lineup accounting for 23½ points out of a possible 24 in play to date.

Kenwood lost all three points in the second foursome to Army and Navy, but otherwise was superior to the Service Club golfers and led by Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Harvey Cooper, won, 8 to 4. Mrs. L. H. Hedrick and Mrs. W. M. Moses were the heroes for Army-Navy, blanking Mrs. A. A. McEntee and Mrs. Harry Sharpe.

Woodmont's first three twosomes scored 2½ points a match over Argyle representatives, and the latter club was able to muster only one player for the last match, Woodmont's fourth duo winning all three points for a 10½ to 1½ margin for the day.

Miss Whipple, also a prominent tennis player, and Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely had surprised Tuesday by holding Chevy Chase's top team to a 1½ to 1½ draw in first round matches. Taking Mrs. Martin for a partner yesterday, the Washington No. 1 team pulled a second straight upset by scoring as many points as Mrs. Davy and Mrs. Godfrey, each team winning one nine and halving the 18-hole match.

Congressional moved into second place back of Manor with 20½ points, while Kenwood was third with 20. However, the three leaders and the defending champions from Chevy Chase, who drew a bye yesterday, have yet to meet each other.

The second round will be played at Beaver Dam next Sunday, the quarter-finals at Hillendale, May 19; the semifinals at Manor, May 26, and the finals at Baltimore Country Club, June 2.

Only seven of the combinations from the local clubs are paired, as the Argyle entries were late but the two teams from the Silver Spring club will be paired on the tee tomorrow afternoon, according to Emmet Gary, State secretary.

College Paddlers Play at American

The first annual District of Columbia table tennis championship tournament will be held on the American University tables this morning, it was announced yesterday by Staff Cassell, A. U. athletic director.

Four-man teams of Catholic University, Georgetown, American, George Washington, Gallaudet and Maryland will participate. A trophy for the individual winner will be donated by Cassell.

First action is set for 10 a. m., and the paddling will continue through 12 o'clock.

Small Field Slated To Start Today in Kentucky Classic

land stake winner and third in the local Derby trials; Ethel V. Mars' Galahadion, advertising Milky Way candy, and Martin J. Schmitt's True Star.

The race writers frowned when True Star was entered because the appearance of the colt's name kept intact their record of never having named a Derby field correctly two days in advance.

True Star sneaked into the entries as a home town pride, much after the fashion that Clark Griffith used to take a Washington boy, who was good to his mother, South with the ball club each spring. True Star is owned by a local lawyer and is trained by his son.

However, True Star is one of the "if" horses and will not start unless the track is muddy. He was purchased at the Saratoga sales two years ago for $550 and the high esteem in which he is held is brought out by the fact that he also is entered in tomorrow's sixth race, a 6-furlong event for nonwinners of $1,500.

Sirroco is another "ifer." Should the track be soggy, Trainer Jimmy Smith says he will leave the "body-by-Fisher" gelding in the barn. There is a slight "if" connected with Royal Man, his handlers hoping for a fast track. Roman will be doubtful if the oval is not muddy.

Five "Sure" Starters

That leaves Bimelech, Dit, Pictor, Mioland and Gallahadion as the "sure" starters.

Hopes for a hundred thousand crowd which were sagging a bit last night and early today, popped up again early this afternoon when the sun broke through the clouds temporarily. Col. Matt Winn, "Mr. Derby, himself," said, "Fair weather has been predicted. We have reservations for the seats of persons coming from a distance and they will be here. That sunshine, and it looks as if it's going to stay, will draw out the people in this area."

The same sun, aided by all the garden tools Churchill Downs can muster, is going to have the track fast by post time tomorrow, it is the local consensus of opinion. However, the scribes have their tongues in their cheeks.

2-5 Odds on Favorite

But sun or no sun, fast track or muddy track, snow or blow, there's going to be a Kentucky Derby tomorrow and you can't deny the fact here in the Blue Grass country. The cold weather, which tended to hold down the mardi gras spirit of the early part of Derby week, is being forgotten as Derby serves as a magnet drawing crowds from all parts of the Nation. Special trains, special planes, special buses are unloading hourly. Tonight and tomorrow will bring the main portion of automobiles and the delegation that walks over from Posey County, Ind.

And Bimelech is "Mr. Big." The Bradley star will march postward the shortest-priced favorite in modern Derby history, with odds of 2 to 5 generally predicted. If the track is fast, some will not be surprised if Bimelech is 1 to 4, the record held by Himyar, the 1878 choice. Old timers point out, too, that Himyar, despite his highly touted superiority, finished second.

That Bimelech will be an odds-on favorite is only logical. The son of Black Toney swept through his six races last year and won his only two starts this season. He took the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland and the Derby Trial Stakes here.

Backed to Limit

"I never quits a winner 'till he's beaten," said the colored porter in the secretary's office this morning. That, too, is the feeling of most horse players, Kentuckians or foreigners, and they are going to back him to the limit.

For second choice, the bettors, with a flair for "something to beat Bimelech," will lean toward Pictor and Dit. The former will have sentimental backing of the colony of Marylanders here, while Dit will draw play from the New York contingent, despite the fact that writers from that section de-emphasized his Wood Memorial victory. Just to keep up the intersectional angle, Mioland is from California and Royal Man is Florida owned.

Mioland is referred to as "the improved horse." Those who swear by workout time will take a gander or two at the West Coast hope. Roman may draw a few megs because he was in front of Bimelech in the early stages of the Derby trial. Gallahadion could lure some play through his recent second to Bimelech, while Royal Man's race behind Pictor at Havre de Grace might play on the imagination of some of the visitors.

Sirroco, on fast track, probably might deny the 50-1 odds being posted on him. However, there is no reason to believe that True Star belongs to the horse family, as far as this race is concerned, but there will be tickets bought on him if I have to buy one myself.

Bimelech is a cinch—on paper. However, horse races are run over race tracks, there are 1,000 and some odd ways to lose a horse race and only one way to win one—cross that finish line first.

In the past 65 Derbies there have been 22 odds-on favorites. Thirteen have won, 9 failed. Make of it what you may.

W. G. Emory, Jr. Enters Golf Finals

W. G. Emory, jr., is in the semi-finals of the Chevy Chase French High Commission Cup tournament after a pair of one-sided victories. Emory defeated P. S. Ridsdale in the first round, and Don E. Deveau in the quarter-finals.

Landra B. Platt was only 3 over par with a 72 as he defeated C. Ashmead Fuller, 4 and 3, in a first-round match.

P. W. Coleman defeated H. R. Harmon, 2 and 1; Walter White defeated D. H. Marthinson, 5 and 3; J. F. Brawner defeated Franklin Fisher 2 and 1; J. P. Lannon defeated Adolph Staton, 6 and 4; L. B. Platt defeated C. A. Fuller, 4 and 3; W. G. Emory, jr., defeated P. S. Ridsdale, 4 and 3; Don E. Deveau defeated Gregory S. Prince, 3 and 2.

Second round—Emory defeated Deveau, 7 and 5.

Central High Suffers First Loss, 6 to 5

G. W. Frosh Defeats High School Nine on Fenlon's Triple

Central High diamonders tasted defeat for the first time this season yesterday on their home lot when George Washington freshmen scored a 6-5 victory on the strength of Roy Fenlon's triple in the eighth inning. The blow sent Joe Gallagher racing home from second.

The loss was charged to Dave performance on the mound. Silver-Buckner, who turned in a 9-hit man and Kloak shared the pitching assignment for the winners, their offerings also being touched for nine safeties. Home runs by Zello Lagos, of Central, and G. W.'s Jerome marked the exciting battle. Both came in the fifth. Jerome's with one man on base.

Central was forced to overcome a 3-0 lead taken by G. W. to go into the eighth all even.

Washington A. A. Stickmen Meet Baltimore Club

What should turn out as Washington A. A. lacrosse team's major test of the season will take place today when the local stickmen travel to Baltimore to face Mount Washington Club.

The Baltimoreans, 1939 national club titlist, are undefeated to date while the D. C. contingent boasts of three triumphs in five starts. Its last, however, was a 5-to-0 shutout of the Washington and Lee University team.

Joe Deckman, manager of the A. A., is hardly optimistic about the outcome of today's game, but is elated with the condition of his team. If his charges win they remain in the race for the club title, otherwise they're out for good.

Arcadia Bowlers Set New Record

Arcadia established an all-time Washington Duckpin Association tournament record at Arcadia Alleys last night as new leaders took over four of the first five Class A positions in the thirtieth annual event.

Shooting 1,955, the Arcadia team broke by nine pins the mark set last year by Cuff and Santini. Diamond Cab, erstwhile leader, slipped into second place while Rosslyn, with 1,846, took third. The other two new pacesetters are Georgetown Recreation, in fourth with 1,843, and Lucky Strike, in fifth with 1,811.

The record-smashing Arcadians were sparked by Fred Murphy's 413. The other team members and their sets are George Demeres, 403; Joe Harrison, 392; Eddie Keefe, 376, and Lou Jenkins, 371.

Chilled Crowd Sees Ida's Beaten, 8 to 4

A slim and chilled crowd sat in on the first softball double-header at Ballston Stadium last night, the Evening Star ten beating Ida's in the opener, 8-4, and Ida's turning back I. B. M., 8-5, in the nightcap. The first clash officially launched the Dixie League, though the second was only an exhibition. Navy Department ten failed to show up for its first meeting with I. B. M. in the Tri-State circuit.

Contract Bridge

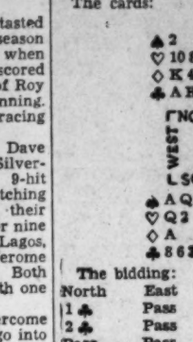
This hand is presented because it involves an extremely difficult guess, to which I believe there are no real clews except possibly the one of distributional symmetry, which unfortunately caused the declarer's defeat.

The cards:



The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♣ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 2 ♣ | Pass | 4 ♠ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

"West opened a diamond," writes A. F. "South won with the ace and led a small club to dummy's king. On this trick, East dropped the nine of clubs; dummy's diamond king was now played and South discarded a heart. The singleton spade in North's hand was now played and South finessed the eight which held the trick. West dropping the spade seven. South now played the heart queen which West won with the king. West returned the club ten.

"At this point, as Ellery Queen says, 'I challenge the reader,' to guess the correct play.

"As a matter of actual fact, South obviously figured the remaining spades to be in the East hand, but because of two singletons in his hand and dummy, finessed the club jack on the theory that the East hand would probably also contain a singleton, in this case, clubs.

"Unfortunately such was not the case. East held the club queen, now unguarded, which won the trick. South trumped the heart return and in desperation played the ace of spades, hoping that the remaining three spades might still be divided two and one. Again South was doomed to disappointment as his first analysis of the spade distribution proved to be correct. Had the club jack been the correct guess, East would have been forced to trump and later would still have won an additional spade trick, but South's contract would have been made."

Boys Club Honors 125 Young Athletes; Redskins Present

One hundred twenty-five athletes of the Boys Club of Washington were honored last night during the second annual award night at club headquarters.

Three members of the Washington Redskins organization—Players Clyde Shugart and Bob McChesney and General Manager Jack Espey—were guests of honor and many of the boys' fathers attended the affair.

Distinction of receiving the most awards went to Johnny Jarboe, outstanding swimmer. His leading rivals for that recognition were Johnny Summers and Tommy Coakley.

No Fight—Bulls Are Too Ladylike

Brookfield, Mo., May 3 (AP).—This community's ballyhooed buffalo bull fight will not be held.

While the State society for prevention of cruelty to animals was pressing its campaign to stop the scheduled fight between two animals imported from Texas by private citizens, one "bull" gave birth to a 100-pound calf today. And the other is expecting.

These Women!

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

With her husband injured and in a hospital, unable to recognize anyone because of amnesia, Smoky O'Toole Stacy's heart was heavy when she arrived at her job in the theater to find that she was the center of publicity. That was because Tex Stacy, the cowboy singer she had married, turned out to be the son of the wealthy Governor, who had already tried to buy off Smoky's marriage. And Smoky was so alone, for her father had just died, and there was only Torchy, another chorus girl, to break the loneliness and help her through the ordeal of interviews.

TORCHY caught Smoky when she swayed. "Hey!" she yelled to Chance, "the girl's goin' to faint."

Chance took Smoky's arm. "Here, don't do that now," he begged. "Not with all the reporters and photographers upstairs."

Smoky sat down on the steps dazedly. "I—I'll be all right."

Torchy was so excited she was, for the moment, incoherent.

In a few seconds Smoky got up. "I suppose I'll have to see them." She was ghastly white without make-up. "So I might as well get it over with."

"You'll find 'em under your bed when you get home, if you don't," Chance predicted, grinning happily. It was the great moment of his life as a theatrical press agent, and he meant to make the best of it.

When Torchy and Smoky made their way through the throng that stormed back after the show, Shamrock had her first taste of what it meant to be a celebrity.

Outside the door was another mob and Torchy made the most of it, smiling prettily and trying to look sympathetic and helpful at the same time. It was Torchy's great moment, too, because the photographers had included her in some of the pictures.

"There she is!" some one cried as the girls tried to break through. There was a hum of excitement.

Two girls asked Smoky for her autograph and because Torchy whispered for her to do it, she signed her name. Shamrock O'Toole.

Torchy told her down the street: "I'd have made it Shamrock O'Toole Stacy, Smoky. Don't be a sap. If you don't make the best of this opportunity, you won't have another one like it come knockin' at your door. Tex's father isn't showing any consideration for you, is he? Tellin' the reporters your husband married you when he was in such a state mentally he didn't know about it. Rot! I don't believe it. What's wrong with a guy marryin' you, I'd like to know? You're the most beautiful girl in our show, and that's from the bottom of my heart."

Headlines Scream!

Torchy paused for breath and spied a newsstand. "Look!" she pointed, gasping. "Headlines!"

She opened her purse and grabbed for nickels and pennies. Then she gathered up an armful of papers and took Smoky's arm excitedly: "I'm dying to get into the subway so we can read them," she jumped up and down with glee. "Oh, boy, what a break for you, Smoky!"

Shamrock followed her into the subway with no show of enthusiasm whatsoever.

Torchy marveled at her indifference. "Honest, Smoky," she told her with a puzzled frown, "I don't get you. Look! You're in the show business. You want to be famous. Everybody does. With all due respect to you, my friend, you're not the best dancer in the world and you can't sing! So what? So you marry the son of a millionaire governor and the world is your oyster with a pearl in it. And you look like you'd just buried your best friend."

Smoky said sadly: "I did, Torchy."

"Oh!" Torchy's hand went to her mouth. "Forgive me, Smoky. I'd forgotten all about your father, dying."

"That's all right," Shamrock said wanly. "I know you are talking to me for my own good. But I just don't seem to be able to see things your way. I wish I could."

They stood waiting for an Astoria train and Torchy sighed: "Maybe you really love Tex. Maybe you thought he really was just a cowboy."

"I did think so," Smoky confessed. "And believe me, Torchy, I'm sorry he isn't just a cowboy."

Urged to Take the Money

"Well," Torchy shrugged, "I suppose there's nothing anybody can say to you. You'll just have to snap out of it and find somebody else. There's no cure but another man. I know that."

When Smoky was silent Torchy babbled: "Believe me, Smoky, if you don't take the governor over for a cool million you ought to have your head examined. You were married under false pretenses, if you didn't know who Tex was. Now his father thinks he can smear you and have the marriage annulled and leave you holding the bag with your broken heart in it. Don't be a sap! Make them pay for it!"

Shamrock said: "Tex's father offered me $250,000 this afternoon. But I told him if I gave Tex his freedom I wouldn't do it because I wanted to be paid for it."

"Oh, you fool!" Torchy exploded. Who's going to thank you for making a martyr out of yourself?"

What the Papers Said

Inside the train they found a corner to themselves and Torchy opened the papers. There were screaming headlines:

"Broadway Cowboy Son of Governor."

"Governor's Son Marries Chorus Girl While Victim of Amnesia, Will Annul."

"Astoria Fireman's Chorus Girl Daughter Bride of Millionaire Governor's Son."

"William Stacy Thayer, Jr., Marries Chorine, Governor Claims Son Mental Case."

Torchy read breathlessly: "In the most sensational romance Broadway has seen in many a moon, William Thayer Stacy, jr., became the husband of Shamrock O'Toole, redheaded chorus girl of a few days ago.

"Miss O'Toole, the daughter of an Astoria fireman who died last week, is one of the Ginger Snaps in the hit musical, 'Snapshots.' Young Stacy, also a member of the company, is at present in an Astoria hospital suffering from an accident received when he was thrown from a horse two days ago.

"Tonight, in an interview in his hotel suite, Gov. Stacy told the press that his son had married Miss O'Toole while suffering from amnesia. He had not been seen by his family since walking off the campus at Harvard two months ago. At the time of his disappearance, the governor's son was dressed in a cowboy outfit, as he had come from the dress rehearsal of a play in which he was to sing the lead.

"With the governor is Miss Alicia Lowery, beautiful society girl whose engagement to the Stacy scion had been announced just a week before. She was pale and distraught and to questions as to whether she planned to marry her former fiance when his marriage was annulled from the chorus girl, she replied that Gov. Stacy would speak for her later. That she was too upset over her fiance's serious illness to discuss the matter with the press."
